New Block For Gov't

By LINDA HUGHES

Details of the building will be announced in a few days but Public Works Minister Bill Hartley said the structure will be "six or seven storeys high."

Hartley would not disclose the exact location of the new building but said it will be outside the legislative precinct in keeping with the province's promise to the city to build some accommodation downtown.

Expansion of the B.C. Hydro and Law Courts buildings are the first steps in the plan, said Hartley, and the new downtown building is the next project.

The minister declined to give any specific outline of the government's over-all expansion plans but he said he is thinking in terms of several buildings of six or seven storeys each.

"It's difficult to imagine one million square feet," he said, "but I always use an example like the Belmont Building.

"It would take 20 Belmont buildings to get one million square feet," she said.

Hartley said he could not accurately predict the cost of the entire project but it could run higher than $50 million.

While the government hopes to decentralize its buildings to help the downtown core and to relieve congestion in the James Bay area, some buildings will definitely be built within the legislative precinct.

Establishment of large parking lots on the northern perimeter of the city to accommodate a park-and-ride scheme for public servants is designed to eliminate the need for some parking lots around the legislature and those lots may be used for future building development.

One parking area, across the street from the motor-vehicle branch on Menzies, is being given prime consideration, said Hartley, but no building has been designed for it yet.

The purpose of office expansion program is to make the government "the master in its home" and to save money, said Hartley.

This year the government will spend more than $5 million on rents and leases in Victoria alone and about $8 million around the province.

Hartley admits the cost of rental accommodation has doubled since last year but he says inflation has hit, the civil service has grown and the government is finally "getting people out of cupboards and closets and vaults and hallways and putting them into worthwhile working space."

JUBA WINS

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Mayor Stephen Juba, who has become something of a local political fixture during his more than two decades in public office, won another landslide victory Wednesday and a ninth consecutive term of office.

Juba's victory was never in doubt from the time results starting coming in.

Commons Erupts Over Filthy Meat

Times News Services

OTTAWA—The scandal over filth in meat erupted today in the Commons when opposition MPs attacked Health Minister Marc Lalonde for saying consumers can cook impurities out of the meat.

New Democratic Party spokesman Ed Broadbent charged that Lalonde's advice on cooking hamburger amounts to suggesting that people can "eat excrement providing it's well cooked."

The attack on Lalonde followed an earlier sharp exchange between the health minister and prices review board chairman Beryl Plumptre who said Wednesday the government has virtually given meat merchants a licence to sell substandard meat.

Plumptre told a news conference that inspection services provided by the health department are inadequate, and government and meat sellers are doing less than enough to see that humburger is safe to eat.

She was commenting on a CBC television program Sunday which reported finding fecal contamination and other bacteria in a number of hamburger samples collected in Ontario.

Lalonde said Wednesday that Plumptre should become better informed and that germs are no problem if hamburger is well cooked. He recommended cooking the meat at 160 degrees or more to destroy any health hazards.

"That's fine if everyone likes to eat hamburger well done," Plumptre shot back at her news conference.

Broadbent urged the government to insure that retail meat outlets are adequately inspected.

Further, he said, it likely would mean an inspector in every home because consumers may not be handling their ground beef properly.

This brought Broadbent to his feet in a hurry, saying the bacteria are potentially fatal and that the minister is saying it is safe to "eat excrement providing it's well-cooked."

Lalonde replied that the NDP leader was not taking the issue seriously and that he "clearly has been carried away by his own imagination."

"There is no relationship between what he has said and what I said," the minister added.

He asked Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan whether he could "take on" Lalonde and Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet to insure that beef is handled properly at every stage between the farm and the home.

Whelan replied that "different departments are known for co-operating" to protect the public.

Jim McGrath, Conservative consumer affairs watchdog, said the government should improve its inspection system so that products "unfit for human consumption" are not for sale.

Lalonde said in an interview later that to strive for food products without bacteria would be "horrendously expensive."

"We have to have realistic standards."

Lalonde, who recently suggested that Canadians try powdered milk to avoid the rising costs of whole milk added:

"You can't have an inspector in every shop in Canada, just like you can't have one policeman for every citizen."

S. Africa Wines Barred

South African wines and liquors will no longer be listed by B.C. liquor stores.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said today B.C. will mark the 30th annniversary of the founding of the United Nations today by banning South African liquor.

The ban is a gesture by B.C. to show its opposition to the "institutionalized racism" practised in South Africa, said Macdonald, and is a signal to the people of South Africa to "reverse these disastrous policies before it is too late."

Macdonald said however, that "individual choice" will remain in B.C. since private citizens will still be able to order cases of South African wines for their own use.

The ban will not mean elimination of South African product immediately, since the liquor stores throughout the province still have 4,991 cases of wine and liquor left.

UIC to Ask For 'Proof'

MONTREAL (CP) — Between 50 and 60 per cent of persons who receive Unemployment Insurance Commission (UIC) benefits will soon need to show proof that there are no job opportunities for them, Supplies and Services Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer said Wednesday.

Mr. Goyer told a meeting of his riding association that legislation is to be introduced strengthening and co-ordinating the operations of the UIC and Canada Manpower centres.

He said the changes will affect recipients in at least four categories but did not elaborate what he meant by "proof."

Whenever there is a shortage in a particular field of work, all UIC recipients who qualify for that work would be called in to report "physically" to the nearest UIC office.

Maternity benefits are to be increased to 15 weeks, up from nine, but women receiving the benefits will be called to the UIC office at the end of that period to determine whether they are looking for a job.

UIC recipients who move from one province to another would have to report to a UIC office in the new province as soon as they settle down.

He also said workers who quit their jobs and request benefits would be called in to explain their case and prove they have not been able to get another job.

Dentist Hurls Candy

Jonathan Howland, interim co-ordinator of the islands regional health and human resources council, said the incident started when he and Dr. Orr were standing beside the candy counter having a discussion about tooth decay.

"I said something like, 'well, what do we do about it then, Robert?' and he replied: 'We start right here' and began picking up packages of jelly beans and announcing that the store was a dope pusher.

"He distributed packages of jelly beans in ever-increasing circles. The store was fairly crowded at the time and everyone just stood there stunned."

Ron Watkins, grocery manager of the Delmas Co-Op, said he will lay a charge of causing a disturbance against Dr. Orr when a magistrate calls at the islands.

"I suppose he has a point, but that's no way to go about making it," said Watkins. "We do sell a lot of candy to the Indian kids here but no more than any other store would."

FOR 78 YEARS Captain George Vancouver, about 400 pounds in bronze, has stared impassively from his lookout atop the Legislative Buildings dome. This morning he came down, gently lowered by workmen using a giant crane. The problem: fallen arches — and who can blame him? Rusting supports through the statue's feet will be replaced.

MIGRANT HOOKERS IN LOADS?

OTTAWA (CP) — Truckloads of prostitutes may be crossing the United States border to ply their trade in Vancouver's Gastown district, George Whittaker (PC—Okanagan-Boundary) said today.

He told the Commons that three law students, working part-time for the Vancouver police department, made the allegation Wednesday on an open-line radio program.

"I have no personal knowledge of this," replied Revenue Minister Ron Basford, whose Vancouver Centre riding encompasses Gastown, a renovated skid road area.

But he promised, amid laughter from both sides of the House, to discuss the matter with Immigration Minister Robert Andras to see "if one or both of us should go to Vancouver to investigate."

Mr. Whittaker, 54 and the father of five, said later his information is sketchy.

"I've never gone down and tested the market. This isn't something I know a lot about, you know."

But the allegations should be checked thoroughly, he said.

"This kind of stuff should not be allowed. The government should step in and put a stop to it."

Bremer Suing Barrett, Dailly

In a British Columbia Supreme Court writ filed Wednesday, Bremer alleges that Premier Barrett libelled and slandered him on CBC television on or about Jan. 11.

NEWS BRIEFS

Violin Genius Dies at 65

A spokesman for the Amsterdam Philharmonic Orchestra said the Soviet violinist, son of a poor Jewish bookkeeper, died shortly before 4 a.m.

Pollution Again

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — For the second time in a week, the department of ecology has issued a statewide air pollution warning, calling for a shutdown of open burning. The department issued a forecast warning, the lowest of four warning levels based on a national weather service forecast of stable air conditions, little air movements, poor ventilation and stagnant air.

Thieu Sacks Four

SAIGON (AP) President Nguyen Van Thieu forced four members of his cabinet to resign today in an attempt to quiet criticism from the U.S. and political demonstrations against his regime in South Vietnam. Those fired included Thieu's cousin, Information Minister Hoang Duc Nha.

School Bombed

LONDON (Reuter) — Harrow school, one of Britain's most famous public schools, was the target for a bomb attack Wednesday night, only 24 hours after a blast at an exclusive London club. Police said a bomb weighing between three and five pounds was placed in a windowsill of a house occupied by three teachers and their wives. Nobody was hurt.

NIXON IN HOSPITAL, SURGERY CONSIDERED

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Former president Richard Nixon was readmitted to Memorial Hospital Wednesday night for further treatment of his left leg. Nixon's doctor said if the treatment proves ineffective, surgery may be required.

Dr. John Lungren, Nixon's personal physician, said the decision to readmit Nixon to the hospital for further diagnostic tests was made after oral medication proved ineffective for treatment of the problem.

Lungren said tests earlier in the evening revealed blockages of blood vessels resulting in a "near total occlusion or blockage of blood flow" in Nixon's left thigh.

Sugar Profit Up 1,200%

NEW YORK (AP) — Great Western United Corp. says soaring sugar prices resulted in a 1,200 per cent increase in the corporation's after-tax profits during the third quarter of this year.

Net income for the three-month period ended Sept. 30 increased to $20.96 million, or $9.23 a share. That compares with $1.6 million, or three cents a share, earned in the same period in 1973. Board chairman Robert Everett credited the sharp increase in earnings to the continuing high level of sugar prices.

Having Trouble With Computers?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Have you ever tried to deal with a computer that persists in sending you bills you have already paid and for which you have sent numerous letters explaining your predicament?

Beginning Monday a Vancouver ombudsman service will operate to help the victims of computer monoliths.

"It should help relieve a major frustration of consumers," says Dave Hinks, of the Consumers' Association of Canada, which joined with the Canadian Information Processing Society to introduce the service.

It is believed the first of its type in Canada and possibly in North America.

The ombudsman office will be staffed by a group of computer experts to handle the complaints lodged by persons finding themselves incapable of further dealings with an unsympathetic computer.

The ombudsman, drawn from the committee of experts on a rotating basis, will work in three areas: handling individual problems, handling class problems where a group of persons have been subjected to the same computer error, and watching for the formation of "computer monsters." Such monsters could include organizations storing massive confidential, personal information.

As there is no legislation backing the service, the ombudsman will have to rely on the good will of the companies or agencies complaints are lodged against.

Dr. Ted Sterling, director of the computing science department at Burnaby's Simon Fraser University, says the group will basically be using persuasion to achieve its aims.

And if a company tells the ombudsman to drop dead?

"The other thing we have is publicity," says Sterling. "But we will not use that weapon lightly."

Owners Smell Bureaucratic Rat

Apartment owners in B.C. fear the government is planning "another multi-million dollar bureaucracy" in addition to the Rentalsman's office, to deal with rent controls.

Richard Dolman, executive-director of the Rental Housing Council of B.C., said Wednesday his group believes the government plans to set up an "allowablesman" to take over some of the functions now handled by Barrie Clark in the rentalsman's office.

"It's just another excuse for further delay and further bureaucracy," said Dolman.

The council believes the government will introduce changes in the Landlord and Tenant Act to set up the new bureaucracy for the sole purpose of recommending new rent ceilings and dealing with complaints about rent increases from tenants.

"The allowablesman will probably acquire a staff of economists and a big bureaucracy and play around with rent increases for another three months," said Dolman.

The charge comes in the wake of an announcement by Clark that he has recommended Attorney-General Alex Macdonald set up a separate commission to decide how large a rent hike landlords should be permitted.

Under the new landlord and tenant legislation, Clark has the power to recommend an allowable rent increase level to replace the interim eight per cent limit on rent increases.

But Clark admitted at a press conference Wednesday he has "ducked the question" by making recommendations to the government without actually suggesting a new figure.

The rentalsman said he believes an independent commission should make the decision on rent increases so he can maintain his new position as impartial judge and mediator in landlord-tenant disputes.

Macdonald had originially promised the new ceiling would be announced by Oct. 1. Then he said by the end of the month and now he says the ceiling will likely not be announced until the legislative session, when changes in the tenant legislation are expected.

The ceiling will come into effect Jan. 1, 1975.

Debate over the issue continues to rage as the apartment owners threaten to strike if Macdonald does not announce the ceiling by the end of the week.

The council, which is demanding either a rent increase ceiling in the range of 20 per cent or no ceiling at all, will meet tonight to discuss further action.

If Macdonald does not have a concrete statement to make after today's cabinet meeting, Dolman says the group will likely decide to strike but will make the official announcement Friday morning.

By striking, the landlords mean they will not rent new apartments which become vacant. About 1,600 landlords belong to the council, a majority of apartment owners in the province.

Meanwhile, Bruce Yorke, president of the B.C. Tenants Organization, rallied with a handful of tenants on the lawns of the Legislative Buildings Wednesday, demanding the eight per cent rent freeze stay in effect.

The tenants placed a large sign on the lawn, reading "Keep Rents Down" and handed Macdonald a 15,000-name petition demanding retention of the rent freeze.

Special Baby Today

Const. Karen Smith nurses Sammy

VANCOUVER (CP) — An eight-month-old boy who was sold for $5 is in the care of the Children's Aid Society, and the woman who bought him says she would like to adopt him.

"I fell in love with him," said Katherine Pelletier, 42. "He's adorable."

She said her two children, aged 9 and 13, also want to keep him.

Mrs. Pelletier and her husband Charles, 50, met a woman Tuesday who said she was the baby's mother.

The couple admired the baby and jokingly asked the woman what she would take for the baby.

"She said $5 and my husband pulled out his wallet, still thinking she was joking," said Mrs. Pelletier. "He half pulled out a bill and the woman grabbed it and pushed the baby into my arms."

The woman handed them a paper bag with four disposable diapers and a half-filled bottle of milk and hurried away.

"She stopped a few feet away and turned back and said: 'By the way, his name is Samuel,' then she went on walking."

The couple took the child home and kept him overnight before calling police Wednesday. Police said the child was in good condition.

Tapes Reveal Nixon's Opinion of Trudeau

WASHINGTON (AP) — The defence lawyers contend that a transcript of a White House paper given to the Watergate cover-up trial jury here attributes to defendant H. R. Haldeman a derogatory statement made about Canada's Prime Minister Trudeau by former president Richard Nixon.

The statement was first brought to the attention of U.S. District Judge John Sirica at a bench conference Monday by Haldeman's lawyer.

In the transcript that accompanied the playing of the tape there is a partial quotation, attributed to Haldeman about ". . . asshole was something else."

After the tape was played one of Haldeman's lawyers, Frank Strickler, told Sirica, out of the hearing of the jury and spectators in the courtroom that it was an unfortunate "errata."

Strickler told the judge "the statement was not made by Mr. Haldeman. It was the president speaking and the statement made was 'Asshole Trudeau.' And that is the way that should read."

John Ehrlichman, another of the five defendants, today submitted a list of corrections of various quotations in the tape and in it he has Nixon saying: "That asshole Trudeau was something else."

At Monday's bench conference, Strickler complained that "Mr. Haldeman was put out that his name was used on this identification. He has not listened to this tape before. I would say to the court, nor had I."

Sirica asked: "Is there any doubt about the fact that the president spoke those words?"

"Not in Mr. Haldeman's mind," Strickler replied.

Ehrlichman's lawyer joined in and said "Mr. Ehrlichman agrees that that was the president's statement."

Stans Seeks Plea Deal

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans, once former President Nixon's premier political fundraiser, has offered to plead guilty to minor charges relating to his 1972 campaign fundraising activities in exchange for having more serious charges dropped, informed sources said Wednesday.

Stans' lawyers proposed the deal to outgoing Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski more than two week ago, sources said, but it was not known what Jaworski's response was.

At the time, sources said, Jaworski told associates that the decision on the Stans' case would be "a tough decision," possibly the toughest he had to make before leaving office later this week. The proposed deal, sources said, included Stans' offer to plead guilty to as many as six technical misdemeanors in exchange for having more serious felony charges dropped.

In court today, John Dean testified that then-White House aides H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman went "back and forth" with former Attorney General John Mitchell in 1972 on who was going to raise hush money for the Watergate burglars.

Under questioning by Mitchell's lawyer, William Hundley, Dean indicated that he sometimes served as a go-between in the dispute over raising the money to pay the Watergate burglars' legal fees and keep them quiet about White House involvement.

The former White House counsel was spending his seventh straight day on the witness stand in the Watergate cover-up trial of Haldeman, Ehrlichman, Mitchell and two other former Nixon associates.

Dean said Mitchell, then campaign director for Nixon, appeared to regard the need to raise money as a White House task and showed no interest in the problem during several meetings with Dean and others.

At the same time, Dean said, Haldeman and Ehrlichman were trying to thrust the responsibility on Mitchell.

"He (Mitchell) told me Haldeman and Ehrlichman should be interested," Dean said. "Haldeman and Ehrlichman said it was Mitchell's problem. It went back and forth."

Meanwhile Henry Ruth, a soft-spoken, 43-year-old government lawyer, has been named special Watergate prosecutor with the same promises of independence his two predecessors had.

Ruth has been no. 2 man in the special prosecution force since it was set up in May, 1973. He survived the firing of the first prosecutor, Archibald Cox, in the "Saturday Night Massacre" the following October.

the weather

Skies will continue mainly clear over the south coast of B.C. and over most of the interior regions of the province Friday. Some fog patches in low lying areas on the coast and in some inland valleys this morning will return again Friday morning. Over the north coast skies are mainly cloudy and some rain is reported from a number of localities as a result of a weather disturbance influencing the Alaskan Panhandle and northern coastal regions of B.C. This weather will change to showers Friday mainly over northern portions of the Charlottes as the weather system gradually weakens.

DOMINION PUBLIC WEATHER OFFICE 10 A.M. FORECASTS Valid Until Midnight Friday

Greater Victoria: Mainly sunny except for morning patches of fog. Highs 55 to 60. Lows tonight 35 to 40.

Lower Mainland, East Vancouver Island: Sunny, except for morning fog patches. Highs 55 to 60. Lows tonight 35 to 40.

North and West Vancouver Island: Sunny with a few cloudy periods. Morning fog patches in low lying areas. Highs in the fifties. Lows tonight in the mid thirties.

Building

position Leader Bill Bennett that the rental costs are "way beyond all reason" and says the NDP has a good record on rental and property acquisition.

Bennett said rental spending in Victoria is an example of "incompetence" and "misallocation of funds."

Inflation and growth in the civil service alone do not explain the increase, said Bennett.

"If we don't need the space," said Hartley, "why did his dad (former premier W. A. C. Bennett) announce in 1968 he was going to build a 55-storey building in Vancouver which would have at least had one million square feet?"

(The NDP scrapped plans for the Bennett tower when they came to office in 1972.)

Rental costs are expensive, said Hartley, but if the government builds its own buildings it will save money in the long run and it can earn some revenue of its own by renting out the prime space on the ground floors for commercial use.

In making his charges this week, Bennett distributed copies of what he called a "secret document" listing all the rental accommodation costs in Victoria.

"Those figures are no secret," said Hartley. "If anyone had wanted them I would have given them out . . . as I answered some questions on accommodation during the spring session (of the legislature.)"

The highest amount of rent is paid to Rupert's Land Trading Co. of Winnipeg, which receives $75,000 a month for leasing 67,000 square feet of space on Oak Street for a provincial government service centre.

New office space in the Harbor Towers hotel-apartment building for lands and forests and highways department officials costs the government $27,000 a month.

Lowest rents listed are a nominal $1 per annum charge paid to Royal Jubilee Hospital and Saanich municipality for health facilities and a $32 charge paid monthly to Blake Plumbing and Heating on Esquimalt Road for the lease of 780 square feet of space.

Much of the rental space is in the downtown region and many government offices are in the Belmont Building, Nootka Court and the Central Building.

Outside of the downtown core, the government rents space in a credit union building on Shelbourne Street, in a church on Gorge Road, in a machinery depot on Dallas Road, and in the Jubilee Centre and Junction Centre further out of town on Fort Street.

The Human Resources department has office space scattered all over the region and both the attorney-general and education departments occupy several different locations around town.

Yehudi Prior Well Nourished, Jury Lays No Blame in Death

Special to The Times

DUNCAN — A coroner's inquest Wednesday found that no one was to blame for the death of two-year-old Yehudi Prior, who died of exposure in bush country near here after wandering about four miles from his home Sept. 23.

The six-man jury found no evidence of foul play and an autopsy report prepared by Dr. S. M. Grant, of Nanaimo, revealed the child was "well nourished and well built."

The report said there were "numerous fine scratches" all over the small body when it was found Sept. 29 lying in a pool of water five inches deep located four miles from where the child had last been seen Sept. 24.

The boy's father, William (River) Prior testified he realized his son was lost about mid-day.

Prior, with the boy on his shoulders, and a friend, John Tinsley, were walking up the trail a few hundred yards from the camp when the boy showed enough interest in something on the road for his father to put him down.

The adults continued a short distance up the path, Prior said, when he thought he heard Yehudi "making noise" from the camp's direction. Both men assumed the boy was on his way home.

When the boy could not be found, Prior began searching. He reported the loss about 6 p.m. that day to Duncan RCMP and later to the Shawnian Lake RCMP.

Cpl. Herbert Schmidt of Shawnigan Lake, testified that Prior said he did not believe search was necessary because he felt the child was all right. Prior said he would make the search himself.

"I don't think I'd admitted to myself that he was lost," said Prior. "I was still believing that maybe he'd gone to sleep or that somebody had picked him up in a car and taken him down the mountain."

Testifying under the Canada Evidence Act, both Prior and Tinsley admitted to smoking a small measure of marijuana earlier that day, but said neither had been impaired by the amount. Prior also testified he had been growing the plant in his garden, but that it was not a reason for hesitation in calling police in on the search.

Police found no evidence of the marijuana when the search was started the next day about noon at the request of Prior.

Polygraph tests were administered to everyone at a campsite where the family was living and tests showed everyone told the truth about what had happened, Schmidt said.

Another investigating officer, Constable Wayne Dew, of Colwood, told the inquest that the child's walking pace was about half a mile an hour. He concluded the child went missing about 2:55 p.m. Sept. 23, and he assumed Yehudi had been walking west on a logging road where he was last seen. Dew estimated the child could have walked four miles before nightfall that day.

Elizabeth Erickson, a social worker with the human resources department, who visited the camp after Yehudi's body was found, testified she believed there was "a good family arrangement" at the camp.

The jury recommended that future searches for lost persons, especially children, should be started without delay.

Authors Club Lunch

Victoria and Islands Branch of the Canadian Authors' Association will hold a luncheon Friday at the Olde England Inn, honoring the national president of the CAA, Cmdr. C. H. Little of Ottawa.

Cmdr. Little, who spent part of his early naval career in Victoria, emphasized the CAA role of advancing interests of authors, both members and others, through the administration of literary awards including the Vicki Metcalfe Award of $1,000, won last year by B.C. author Christie Harris.

Nominations for a new $1,000 award made available by a tobacco firm will be considered this fall.

LIFE-DEATH FOR 25,000 SURVIVORS

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — About 25,000 Hondurans still are marooned by floods from Hurricane Fifi and are threatened with starvation, an official of the Organization of American States reports.

OAS representative Fernando Hernandez de Aguera appealed to the other members of the organization Wednesday to send helicopters for a rescue operation.

"It is a matter of life and death," he said.

Fifi hit Honduras five weeks ago, on Sept. 19, causing an estimated 8,000 deaths and leaving more than 100,000 persons homeless.

Community News Round-Up

There's More News On Pages 9 and 10

Almost 3,000 people have signed a petition against the proposed pub on Gladstone near Fernwood.

This was reported at a meeting this week of the ad hoc FERNWOOD Anti-Pub Committee chaired by Dave Garman.

He said the committee and most of those signing the petition were not against pubs as such but against the location of the proposed facility.

Garman said it's too close to schools, the human resources branch and the Indian Friendship Centre.

Hans Frederiksen, president of the Fernwood Community Association, praised the group for the work they put into the petition and suggested they use the community association in determining community feelings on this or any other issue.

The meeting this week was to wind up business and to let officers of the committee continue with the work. It will be re-activated whenever the city of Victoria calls a hearing.

A formal application for a Fernwood pub has not yet been made to the Liquor Administration Branch.

There's something planned for the whole family at NEWTON GARDENS on Sunday nights. Films will be shown in the arts and crafts room every Sunday with the first show to start at 7 p.m.

In other news concerning the Newton Gardens Recreation program, Mrs. Joan Fielding will help with the arts and crafts classes.

Starting Sunday, Nov. 3, and continuing the first Sunday of the month, there will be "swap and shop" sessions.

This Monday will be the start of the babysitting course offered by the Saanich fire department. It's open to anyone 12 years of age and over and starts at 7 in the arts and crafts room.

How to raise funds to wipe out a $100 deficit incurred in building and painting a public float on the lake was the main piece of business at a meeting of the FLORENCE LAKE Involvement Association.

Director Gaston Miron says the group is soliciting donations from everyone, including those who do not live on the lake shore.

"Their children also use the float to swim from and should help us," says Miron.

A membership drive has also been launched offering residents the choice of buying a two-year membership instead of one as a means of paying off the debt.

The association would like to remind principals and teachers in the Sooke school district that volunteers are available to conduct tours of the lake.

"This is a good opportunity for students to study the flora in this section of the community. We've sent invitations some time ago but not one teacher has accepted," says Miron.

A community pre-school day care centre in SOOKE may become a reality in the next month or so. Residents in the town are seeking a Local Initiatives Project grant and support for the idea has come from the elementary school principal, human resources branch, local businesses and 400 who signed a petition presented to LIP officials.

Hoping for funding, project backers have begun a search for suitable facilities. Anyone interested can call the Victoria Community Action office, 382-1423.

In other COMMUNITY ACTION GROUP news, a group of lawyers visited the office at 551½ Fisgard. They were Peter Leask and Rick Mahoney from Vancouver, Doug Webmar from Penticton and Allan Cox of Victoria.

Discussed were various methods of helping people get proper justice such as the supplying of lawyers to handle UIC inquiries; the need for lawyers to give advice over the telephone; legal aid for remote areas of the Island; and advice for those serving sentences in provincial or federal jails with a lawyer visiting the institutions on a weekly basis.

It was suggested a special committee be set up to let native people know what resources are available after leaving reserves to live in a community.

The JAMES BAY Community Association will not be renting Moffit House as a community resource centre.

This was reported today by president Beverley Kieferle who said negotiations with the owner, Bill McKenzie, have been called off.

She says the association is still seeking a location near the core of James Bay.

The committee to hire a co-ordinator director of community services has trimmed the list of candidates to five from 65.

Kieferle says all final candidates are from British Columbia and the director will be selected early in November.

The committee is also studying applications for the position of doctor. There were 12 applications.

If there were any doubts concerning the popularity of community schools the JAMES BAY experience last week has now cast them aside.

Close to 600 people registered for the more than 30 programs offered by Victoria's first community-oriented school.

"We were swamped . . . it's the best response any community school in B.C. has had; we're trying to cope with it and until the addition to James Bay School is ready we'll be using South Park School."

Adding to the problems of coping with the evening program is the delay in opening the new addition to James Bay school.

More inspections were held this week and meetings scheduled between the school board, architect and contractor.

WHITEHEAD . . . 30 years with association

Time to Retire Says Whitehead

For almost 30 years, Jack Whitehead has been associated in one way or another with the Prospect Lake Community Association.

This year, he says, is his last as president.

Whitehead says he will not stand for re-election at the group's annual dinner meeting Tuesday, Oct. 29, in the community hall on Spartan Road.

"I will still be involved . . . such as calling the bingos, but it's time for someone else to take over the presidency."

It was shortly after the Second World War residents tried to form a community group. This initial effort fell through and in the early 1950s interest was renewed.

Whitehead was active then and in the early 1960s in the fund raising campaign to build the present hall.

Any Room in the Canadian Mosaic?

No matter how kind a face Immigration Minister Robert Andras tries to put on the changed regulations for prospective emigrants to Canada, no matter how many times he repeats that they are not discriminatory, the people centrally affected by the new rules will form a perhaps more cynical opinion.

He said the changes, designed to reduce the numbers coming here to settle permanently, were made because immigration is rising at almost 50 per cent a year when housing is scarce, unemployment appears to be on the upswing and social services are badly overloaded.

Well might a hopeful emigrant reply that the solution is to build more houses, create more jobs and improve social services instead of slashing immigration — attack the central problem rather than one of its small contributing factors.

Criticism by Conservative and New Democratic Party spokesmen that the changes acknowledge a failure of economic policy, a helplessness on the part of the Liberal government to solve or even significantly ease the unemployment problem, hits the nail on the head.

Canada for decades has enjoyed a favorable opinion among nations for its liberal immigration policies, which helped millions of displaced people out of often desperate conditions who in turn made Canada into the vigorous, growing nation it is today.

Immigrants filled a vacuum on the prairies and made it our bread basket. After the Second World War we welcomed a million Italians, many of them builders who helped change quiet Canadian cities into lively metropolises. Refugees from tyranny in Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Uganda found a haven here. Their skills and talents have more than repaid the money spent to bring them here. Many of Canada's physicians, engineers and other professionals are immigrants, trained at no expense to us.

White Europeans have traditionally formed the bulk of Canada's immigrants, but the character of immigration is changing. More and more people from the underdeveloped nations are knocking on Canada's front door. Although actual numbers are still small, the percentage increases over the last two years are huge. Immigration from South America and Africa jumped 233 per cent, from south Asia and the Caribbean, 175 per cent. Perhaps this is the trend that so alarmed the minister, and not so much the forecast jump in total numbers.

He says the new rules will not discriminate, but they will hit hardest the poorly-educated and unskilled — in short, those from the third world.

Will we be content to pay a widow's mite in foreign aid — aid that is good business for Canada as well as good public relations — but draw the line at inviting the recipients to better themselves on our home territory? There should be ample room for all races, all colors in the much-vaunted peaceful Canadian mosaic.

CRB Plan Needs Amendments

Elsewhere on this page is a detailed look at the Capital Regional Plan that will control development on Southern Vancouver Island until the turn of the century. It is an important plan that will effect the lives of each and everyone of us if it becomes law. It is also an imperfect plan, as all things are which man attempts, especially when he tries to predict the future.

Still, it is urgently needed in an area with spotty services, unorganized territories that sprawl in ugly disarray, and an inadequate sewage system on the verge of becoming a serious health problem. At public hearings earlier this week objections surfaced and amendments were suggested. Foremost among them was an appeal that more study is needed before large scale settlement in the Highland district is approved. If the studies show high costs, transportation difficulties, ecological problems and sewage disposal problems, the area should be classed as "uplands" in plan terminology and left undeveloped. Nor should the plan allow any more sewage outfalls into the Strait of Juan de Fuca. Local municipalities already are dumping millions of gallons of raw sewage into this channel each day. Treatment plants on land are needed to end this issue. And finally local autonomy needs to be spelled out so each municipality knows its responsibilities and rights. As it stands the plan is as vague as the future it hopes to control.

A Dangerous Power Over TV

NEW YORK — President Ford has set a notable example, and taken a long step toward an open presidency, by his appearance before a U.S. congressional subcommittee — a precedent that may have much meaning for the future. But just two days before, Ford had demonstrated the extent to which presidential powers are still unchecked and may be subject to political abuse.

Ford had announced his intention to speak on what American citizens "individually and collectively" could do to fight inflation and conserve energy. The television networks decided that the address would have little news value and none of them scheduled live coverage for Ford's appearance before a Future Farmers of America meeting in Kansas City.

Poor Substitute

That is an editorial judgment that news executives are entitled to make — as they would have been to make the opposite decision. But Ford refused to accept it and made a formal request of the networks that they broadcast his speech in the prime evening hours.

This was amateurish of the White House, for at least two reasons. One was that prime time on NBC was occupied by the third game of the world series, a sporting event many Americans do not take lightly. The other was that, as the network news executives had suspected, Ford did not have much to say. After the fuss he had made about obtaining time, his appearance was at best an anticlimax, at worst an annoyance to baseball fans. Advising Americans to plant vegetable gardens, seek bargains and drive slowly is a poor substitute for even Joe Garagiola, let alone Catfish Hunter.

But aside from these White House fumbles, the plain fact is that the president was able to demand and get time from the networks, blanket all three of them for a period in the prime viewing hours, and impose what he had to say on the nation, even though able and experienced news executives, acting separately, had determined in advance that he had little to say that was newsworthy.

Ford was able to do this, moreover, just three weeks to the day before a national election that he has been describing as of critical importance to the survival of the Republican party. Even though his speech was relatively innocuous — though it might have cost him some of the baseball vote — his appearance may well have had a good political impact for Republicans either in its net effect or in particular localities. And it could have been an openly political speech, had Ford chosen to make it so.

PRESIDENT FORD
. . . awesome powers at hand

This is a presidential power that no one wrote into the U.S. constitution, or even implied in that document, and one that has not been adequately studied or considered by congress, the Federal Communications Commission or anyone else. It is the power to command a vast audience almost at will, and to appear before that audience in all the impressive roles a president can play — from manager of the economy to commander-in-chief.

This power raises two problems of considerable gravity. It obviously gives a president (of either party) an enormous advantage over his political opposition, as well as over the other branches and institutions of government, in molding public opinion. It magnifies a thousand-fold what Theodore Roosevelt, long before television, called the "bully pulpit" of the presidency.

If a president can command the airwaves almost at will, moreover, broadcast journalism never will be able to reach the independence and equal constitutional status with print journalism that it deserves, and that the people are entitled to expect of it. Presidents can't command any newspaper to carry the texts of their speeches; and they should not be able to command the networks to broadcast the speeches.

Some Balance

The best remedy would be for network news executives to exercise rigorous news judgment on every presidential attempt to use the air waves, and to reject all such attempts that in their news judgment are unworthy. Practically speaking, however, it is not easy for the networks to turn down a president who wants to go on the air, particularly if he says he intends to speak on "national security" matters.

Nor is it easy to ascertain in advance if such a claim is valid. Repeated, apparently concerted refusals by the networks would run the risk either of antitrust questions or Agnew-like charges of a media conspiracy, or both.

Automatic assignment of equal time to the opposition works well in Britain, balancing a prime minister's ability to shape public opinion and causing him to consider whether his own appearance is worth providing a similar opportunity for the leader of the opposition. But there is no recognized leader of the opposition here and no guarantee that the opposition party will control congress, as it does now.

Ford's transgression and the networks' acquiescence in it were of no great importance; but the incident shows what could happen, which is why broadcast journalists, members of congress and anyone wary of unchecked power ought to give the matter serious thought.

A General Scheme, No Detail

And that is exactly what the Official Regional plan is — a pig in a poke. The negative is there but the picture has not been developed.

"A general scheme without detail for the projected uses of land within the Victorian Metropolitan area of the Capital Regional District including the location of major highways," is how the plan defines itself.

Without details how can municipalities, ratepayers and concerned citizens endorse what amounts to a methodology as murky as a Highland mist?

In reference to a question on solving transportation problems if the Highlands becomes a bedroom community, CRB Chairman Jim Campbell said, "It is necessary for a considerable amount of study to be done . . ."

Common sense dictates that studies are done before the votes are taken. But third and final reading of the plan — will be voted on by the Capital Regional board soon. It's extreme importance to this community with all the implications of reduced local autonomy, cannot be overstated.

So what exactly is the plan?

Defines Land Use

It defines commercial, industrial, residential and park areas, and provides for the orderly development of the region "that may accommodate 370,000 people by 1996. Downtown Victoria remains the retail and non-retail commercial centre of the Victorian Metropolitan area," while so-called "regional centres" are limited to between 100,000 and 400,000 square feet.

If that sounds like a sweetheart clause for city businessman, remember that the areas' largest shopping centres are not much over 400,000 square feet now.

Subservient to the broad regional plan "Official Community Plans" will be formulated within two years at the local level. They will be concerned with land use and servicing in individual areas, but in conformity with the all encompassing regional plan.

As Mayor Ed Lum noted in the Saanich brief it places "the final power of decision for local land use amendments in the hands of what is in effect the provincial cabinet . . ."

Under section 797 of the Municipal Act neither the regional board or individual councils "shall enact any provision or initiate any works which would . . . impede . . . the regional plan."

Despite assurances of flexibility, once sanctioned the plan may prove unwieldy because of its all encompassing nature, and the number of areas involved.

The "allocation of population, 1971 and 1996" table forms the basis for land use and plan policies.

North Saanich, Sidney, Central Saanich and Saanich will approximately double in population; Victoria proper will go from 61,761 to 85,900; Oak Bay from 18,426 to 24,000; Esquimalt from 12,922 to

JAMES CAMPBELL
. . . board chairman

18,500; View Royal from 4,099 to 8,000 and something labelled the Western Community, taking in the Highlands and environs, will more than triple from a current 17,328 to 54,000.

The 15,000 acre Highland area, with its 15 low level lakes, 10 miles of streams and water courses, and eight miles of shore line along Finlayson arm is destined to house up to 25,000 people. The provincial government has already acquired nearly 3,000 acres in the region.

A $200,000 sewer study is underway to evaluate connecting up the Albert Head trunk sewer line with the Highlands.

Acquire the land and everything else will follow, seems to be the attitude. Yet no transportation studies have been published; inadequate cost and environmental studies have barely scratched the surface of the project.

If a private corporation proceeded in this manner government would squash the project before a sod was turned.

It is also worth noting that a Greater Vancouver Regional District report estimates development costs for undeveloped land at $20 to $35,000 per acre. Using the most conservative figure that means a basic $80 million to make the Highlands into a bedroom community, and those were 1973 figures.

A regional plan, and eventual amalgamation of inefficient overlapping municipalities is a desirable goal. Perhaps the urgency with which Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen and Mr. Campbell are pushing the project can be explained by a fear that an impatient provincial government will step in and superimpose its own order.

Motherhood Motifs

It is odd that Mayor Pollen, who has worked hard on the plan, was in Vancouver battling the windmills of radio land rather than attending the Tuesday public hearing on the regional plan issue.

Struggling through the Victoria Metropolitan Area Official Regional Plan, Schedule A, with its three pages of definitions, strange jargon and motherhood motifs makes one uneasy.

Would we be giving up too much autonomy for too little substance? Once sanctioned, will the CRB — whose members are not directly elected to the regional board — and the provincial government use the plan to impose what they think is best for the people?

Such questions are impossible to answer now.

Everyone is in favor of a capital regional plan but nobody wants to change anything in their own bailiwick.

Urgently dictates that if we are to avoid the chaos of 370,000 people scattered haphazardly in one vast urban slurb the regional plan, subject to amendments raised at the public hearings should be adopted.

The pig has been grunting for some time now. If we don't put a ring through its nose it could trample us.

United Appeal

At the risk of incurring the wrath of the media, who are dependent on paid advertising to keep their product in front of the public, I must register my concern, and that of others, I feel, re the policy of what I assume is the United Appeal publicity committee.

It is my understanding, through enquiries at the source, that a full page advertisement, and an accompanying quarter page advertisement appearing in the Times and Colonist recently plugging the merits of the United Appeal was paid for by the U.A. to the tune of $1,150 plus color charges.

If you tack this cost on to that of the publicity being purchased on radio and television, both a very high cost proposition, we are looking at a figure that would astound many people. Doubtless, there will be further paid publicity of this proportion, and I can only say that this money would, in my opinion, be better spent for the purpose it is intended, namely, helping participating agencies.

Reaction to this letter may be that one has to invest to make money, or in this case, obtain public response. I for one don't quite see it this way when the organization is a charitable one like the appeal, or any other, who are handling public funds donated for charitable purposes.

Admittedly, Greater Victoria, is a large area to cover, and adequate publicity must be obtained if they are to reach their target. However, it is my experience with the media that if you have the right approach, and a good cause, as I feel the U.A. have, that they will cooperate fully through their various news and public service departments to give you the required publicity in any way they can, as a community gesture.

I am sure other agencies in a similar capacity use this method of publicizing their needs, and for a multiple agency representative body such as United Appeal, surely the media could provide top news and pictorial coverage for them in a similar manner, for the six or eight weeks of the main drive.

My suggestion to the United Appeal, for what it's worth, is leave the paid advertising up to the retailers, who are in business, primarily, to make personal monetary gain. Don't spend public funds so freely.

To the media, how about a return to the old community spirit, coming out from under the rug of crass commercialism, and extending the helping hand 100 per cent to the helping professions?

I guarantee you will find it quite refreshing, rewarding, and other than the effort involved, not too costly, really. — W. Burton, 1701 Cedar Hill X Road.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of October 24, 1914

The last of the whaling fleet has returned to Victoria for the winter. Yesterday afternoon, the Blue tied up alongside of the other whalers at Point Ellice. Today she is paying off her crew at the shipping master's office. The Blue was one of the first whalers to clear and all summer she has been operating out of Naden harbor. During the season she harpooned no less than 105 whales which is an exceptionally good catch for a vessel working off the Queen Charlotte Islands. But every whaler did well this year. Favorable weather off the west coast of Vancouver Island and the Queen Charlotte Islands gave the whalers more opportunities to run up the mammals.

Agri-Power Politics And Wanton Waste

By JAMES EAYRS

Of all the forms of global village idiocy, none is quite so appalling as the practice of wantonly destroying food even though millions of global villagers go hungry.

That was common in the bad old days. Economists had their word for it — "valorization". The purpose seemed sound enough — to smooth out the bumpy passage from glut and low prices one season to scarcity and high the next by controlling the supply that came to market.

But in the Dirty Thirties, controlling the supply all too often meant destroying the supply. In the name of valorization and stability, crops and produce went, quite literally, up in smoke or down the drain.

Brazil burned bags of coffee by the millions. Cuba cut back on sugar cane. The United States restricted wheat acreage, plowed food crops as well as cotton under. The first card dealt to U.S. agriculture by Roosevelt's New Deal was to slaughter 400,000 baby pigs — this at a time when a pound of lard, let alone of bacon, was out of reach of the weekly food budget of the wretched of North America.

Never has economics better deserved its sobriquet as "the dismal science."

Forty years later, and what has it taught us? Apparently, not much. If government is less keen on cutting back supply — the scrambled egg policy of the Ontario marketing board notwithstanding — producers resort to it in protest.

Last year it was dairymen spilling their milk out on the highway. This year it is cattlemen butchering their calves.

Such scenes of wanton waste shock even the well-fed. What must be their impact on the hungry?

To scorch your own good earth — that makes sense to deny it to invaders, but not to needy neighbours. Here is global village idiocy with a vengeance, for it will make invaders of those needy neighbours.

"Wars of redistribution" launched by governments of desperately poor countries against the rich, using their new-found nuclear capability "to force the developed world to transfer large amounts of wealth to the poverty stricken world", is the prominent feature of that bleak landscape foreseen by the economist Robert L. Heilbroner.

Unless we learn to change our ways.

So the world's great protein powers — Canada and the United States which together control a larger share of the global grain supply han the Middle East does of the global oil supply, Australia, New Zealand, Argentina, perhaps France — approach a fateful crossroad.

One path leads to agri-power politics.

Agri-power politicians argue that food should be used as an instrument of foreign policy, for it is the most potent instrument at hand. Possession by the protein powers of so much of what the world needs to feed itself equips them with a weapon no less persuasive than the atomic bomb itself.

By dispensing food to favourites, by withholding food from trouble-makers, the protein powers can make the world much more to their liking than to the liking of oil sheikhdoms or third world revolutionaries.

Especially by withholding food from trouble-makers. So General MacArthur understood when appealing in 1951 for a food blockade of China. "A rifle kills a single man", the General told the U.S. Congress then, "a machine-gun kills them by the score; heavy artillery and bombs kill them by thousands, the atomic bomb by the hundred thousand. But when you put your blockade on them, and prevent them from getting food, you threaten the life of the whole group. A blockade threatens destruction by the millions".

So far agri-power politics is in full cry only among publicists, like Eliot "Calamity" Janeway. But it is beginning to be heard in statesmen's speeches, too.

U.S. Secretary of State Kissinger flirted with it openly this summer, by remarking "We had not in the past thought that agricultural exports required foreign policy decisions" — a lightly veiled threat that in the future agricultural exports will be thought to require foreign policy decisions.

U.S. President Ford flirted with it even more openly this fall, by remarking "it has not been our policy to use food as a political weapon" — a still more lightly veiled threat that this policy could change.

The frankest exposition of agri-power politics in Canada comes from Robert Kaplan, Liberal MP for York Centre. He foresees "a totally new and powerful status for Canada in international affairs . . . The key to our new-found power lies in prairie fields." Our decision on "which hungry foreign nations should have the privilege of buying Canadian wheat" should be made not on the basis of its needs but on the basis of its policies. If Arab states won't shape up — on oil, on Israel — we should not ship out.

The path away from agri-power politics leads to a world protein authority. Food is no longer an instrument of foreign policy but a sacred trust. The protein powers, favoured by providence, share their good fortune with others, surrender their monopoly to supernational control.

We have heard this great debate before — though pitch-blende, not protein, was the commodity in question.

It took place in New York City in 1946. Ought the world's store of uranium of which Canada then had an even greater share than we do now of wheat, together with the weapons and the energy that could be made from it, to be entrusted to a world government?

Next month, in Rome, the same debate will be argued once again. Agripower nationalists will vie with advocates of depoliticizing protein, making food a global trust.

Agri-power nationalism will win, as nuclear power nationalism won in 1946. But now, as then, the victory is Pyrrhic. For in the wars of redistribution bound to come in a world where wealthy states try to starve others into submission, survivors will envy the dead.

Will It Be War Again?

By LEONARD SILK

Inevitably these days, in midst of rampant inflation, growing unemployment, economic stagnation, famine in the poor lands and a threatened world monetary breakdown that could result from the sky-high price of oil and the vast flow of money to the oil-exporting countries, fears of war are rising.

Those fears dogged last week's meetings of the International Monetary Fund and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development — the World Bank — in Washington. One heard them expressed in many private discussions, and sometimes even from the rostrum of the cavernous auditorium of the Sheraton-Park Hotel.

Spurt of Activity

"Is it not tragic," said Mubashir Hasan, the finance minister of Pakistan, "that it is mainly when nations have plunged themselves into wars that there has been a sudden spurt of creative activity on the production front? Men and women have toiled day and night, instead of working five days a week, and achieved technological breakthroughs which have tremendously boosted production and helped usher in new eras of prosperity later on."

Is this mankind's ghastly little secret — that we really need war to provide the spur for creative activity and social cohesion, to inspire all that is "best" in men?

Some scholars have long thought so. For instance, Prof. Everett E. Hagen of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in his studies of Japan, concluded that military threats to a nation may be a powerful force toward economic growth, especially if combined with internal forces pushing toward technological development.

This is no new thought. The ancients put great stress on the threats of enemies in developing the genius of a nation.

To be sure, the price of war as an elixir of nations has been going up. "Winners emerge from wars as losers," said the Pakistani minister, "and losers are obliterated."

But, in the past, fruitful activity followed war. International organizations were created to expand trade, to maintain employment and real incomes, to reconstruct and develop economies on a more equitable and just basis.

That was the story of the Second World War and the Bretton Woods institutions — the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank — that emerged from it. And those are the institutions that are now struggling for their survival. For the postwar era appears to have exhausted itself, and subtly, horribly, been converted into what feels like a prewar era. Is mankind preparing itself again for one of its dark nights of creation?

In the nuclear age, God forbid.

Yet as Hasan put it: "The question before the world today is whether the destruction and bloodshed that a global conflict involves is really a prerequisite to a spurt in productive activity by nations and to a restructuring of the international economic order on a just basis.

"Must the nations first make the terrible sacrifice of human life and property before they bring themselves to taking those hard decisions which alone would save mankind from starvation and death!"

Learn to Share

This time the world cannot go through its historic blood rites of spring as a prelude to a new era of growth.

The nations must settle down to the hard work of finding a way to share the earth's limited resources equitably, to distribute income and capital and knowledge more fairly. This is not simply a contest between the rich nations and the poor, as the oversimplified rhetoric of the earlier postwar period had it, and still has it. Rather, the time has come to recognize that there can be injustice not only between rich and poor but between oil-rich and oil-poor, those with ample food and with none—and that such injustice exists within states and not only as between states.

Many of the poor nations neglect their own poor most cruelly. "It is now clear that more than a decade of rapid growth in underdeveloped countries has been of little or no benefit to perhaps a third of their population," observes Hollis Chenery of the World Bank in a new study, Redistribution with Growth.

While average per-capita income of the Third World has risen by 50 per cent since 1960, this growth has been very unequally distributed among socio-economic groups and regions within countries.

Economic growth alone is no answer to the misery and death that now stalks the poor. Reform within nations and economic co-operation among nations is the only viable answer.

In the nuclear age, we live under the sea, as in a sunken submarine. We are afraid to bomb; all will die. We want to get back to the surface, to the air, to live in peace. But we are held down by our human past, by our mean antagonisms, by the rigidity of our habits and the faintness of our hopes.

THE GAMES PEOPLE PLAY

By JUDITH MARTIN

In thousands of homes — warm idealistic places where war toys are banned or at least controlled by treaty, and everybody is taught to worry about the health and welfare of the ants in the ant farm — there lurks a toy which encourages children to defy the law to satisfy personal greed.

It teaches them to perform acts which will drive the weak into ruin and will wreck the economy. Usually, everybody in the family adores this toy. It's called Monopoly.

More than 8 million Monopoly sets have been sold since 1935, which means untold millions of citizens of all ages spending endless evenings trying to buy up all the available land, control the railroads, put the electric company and the waterworks under their private ownership, and make up to 225 per cent profit on their capital investments.

Nevertheless, some people remain unconvinced that this is the American way. One of them, an economist named Ralph Anspach, has designed a game called Anti-Monopoly, with a few relevant lines from the Sherman Antitrust Law printed on the cover. In Anti-Monopoly, you get your financial glory from the satisfaction of managing a budget sensibly, while you go around selflessly busting trusts to win "social points."

Since the game was put on the market nationally last June, he has sold more than 50,000 sets. He has also brought an antitrust suit against General Mills, the conglomerate that owns Parker Brothers, which sells Monopoly.

General Mills has filed a cross complaint of trademark infringement. Two previous moves, to get injunctions against the game, were denied in Canadian and American courts.

"You wouldn't believe the interplay between the games and game industry," said Anspach, a San Francisco State University economics professor who invested $5,000 in forming a company to publish Anti-Monopoly. He said he does not take a salary from his company, and plans to use five per cent of the profits to form "an antimonopoly foundation" and another part to establish a prize for a "Trust Buster of the Year."

"I'm not antibusiness, or even antibig business," said Anspach. "But we are going to have stagflation — this combination of unemployment and inflation — until we come to grips with it by restructuring the organization of industry to get back to a more competitive economy."

As a hideous example, he cited — the game industry. "The cereal companies — General Mills, General Foods, Kellogg — have bought up the toys and games companies. They have all that Saturday morning television time, and you need all that time in the few months before Christmas to advertise games. Before anybody will carry a game, they want to know how you're going to advertise it."

The companies are now being investigated by the Federal Trade Commission. Anspach, meanwhile, is investigating the history of Monopoly, which he suspects is not entitled to its patent because it was marketed for several years by its inventor before Parker Brothers bought it.

"I tell you, it's another Watergate," he said.

Coop Comes to the Rescue

RUSSELL BAKER

I go to the movies. Gary Cooper is in the next seat as usual, wearing his badge and Stetson. I am sick and tired of him. He grins and offers popcorn. "What are we going to see tonight?" he asks. "'The Sting,'" I say, "and this time stay out of it, Coop."

"Shucks," says Cooper. "You know me."

I know Gary Cooper all right. The previous week he embarrassed me at "Chinatown." The unprincipled cop was just about to let John Huston get away with murder, on account of Huston's being a millionaire, when Coop threw his popcorn box on the floor, strode down the aisle and drew his six-shooter on Huston and the cop.

"Get off the screen," the audience yelled, but Gary Cooper paid them no heed. "I'm taking you both down to the U.S. Marshal's office," he said.

"You better get on your buckboard and get out of town fast, son," Cooper told him, "before I take you in for interfering with an arrest."

It was a long speech for Cooper, so without another word he marched Huston and the cop off the screen and the movie ended with Nicholson heading for Laramie.

"Just stay out of it, Coop,' I say.

After a while he begins stirring unhappily. "These fellows are nothing but a bunch of crooks," he whispers.

"They happen to be Robert Redford and Paul Newman," I say. "Even if they are crooks, they're charming and lovable, and the audience loves them, so stay out of it."

It is too late. He is already striding down the aisle and up on the screen with the drop on the whole roomful of swindlers before even Newman can get away with the loot.

"Get those hands up," he says. "We're all going to take a little walk down to the marshal's office."

The audience boos as Cooper rides them all off into the sunset manacled aboard cayuses. I am fearful that someone will know Cooper was with me and beat me for being an accessory to the triumph of law.

My analyst is no comfort. "You are merely hallucinating Cooper as an agent for fulfilling childish desire for heroes who are honest," he says. He suggests staying away from movies in which criminality and corruption prevail until I become less infantile.

So I go to "Deep Throat." Cooper is there. After 10 minutes he says, "Whew."

"Stay out of it, Coop," I plead. Futilely, of course.

"Miss Lovelace," says Cooper, towering over her on the screen, "you need a little church training."

He throws her over his shoulders, covers her with his badge and says, 'I'm taking you down to the schoolmarm so she can introduce you to the Ladies Aid Society."

The audience pelts the screen with comic books and dark glasses.

My analyst loves this report. He asks me to commit myself for study at the Institute of Incredible Sexual Repressions in Zurich. I run.

To the movies, of course. But this time to "The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz," which I know in advance is merely about an ambitious young man.

Cooper is there. He even likes the movie. "This is okay," he grins as Duddy goes into the business of making home movies of bar mitzvahs. But what is this? Duddy is behaving rudely to grownups. Yes, very rudely. He is laughing at them and ordering them off his land. Cooper is in the aisle before I can stop him. "Stay out of it, Coop."

It is useless. Up on the screen Cooper has Duddy under his right gun arm and he is saying, "Young fellow, I'm taking you over to old Judge Hardy's booklined den for a man-to-man talk about good manners." End of picture.

Quickly, I run to see "Going Places," figuring Cooper will be tied up giving Andy Hardy some quick-draw tips, but he arrives in time to see the movie's two utterly charming heroes engage charmingly in burglary, kidnapping, car theft and casual thuggery. "Those fellows are nothing but a pair of skunks," he says, striding down the aisle.

"Stay out of it, Coop!"

The audience is enraged to see him rescue a lovely mother from ravishment, but Cooper takes the charmers to the marshal's office anyhow.

My analyst says Gary Cooper is dead and I am too immature to accept reality. Cooper looks at the analyst without expression. "I could take him down to the marshal's office for taking money for useless explanations," says Cooper.

"Stay out of it, Coop!" I plead.

PENNY GETS HEARING

Bus driver Penny Harding — the girl B.C. Hydro transit won't hire — will get a hearing next week arranged by the Human Rights Commission.

Director Kathleen Ruff said today a meeting had been arranged between Hydro, the commission and Mrs. Harding in an effort to reach an understanding of the matter.

Harding said she had been denied a driving job while men with no previous experience were hired. She claims four years' bus driving experience and at present is employed by Vancouver Island Coach Lines as a hostess.

Alberta Gov't Defends PWA Purchase

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government's purchase of Pacific Western Airlines (PWA) was defended Wednesday as the legislature began its fall sitting.

Premier Peter Lougheed, Intergovernmental Affairs minister Don Getty and Industry Minister Fred Peacock joined forces to defend the Aug. 2 purchase, but their comments failed to convince the opposition.

Bob Clark, Social Credit house leader, told the legislature there were "gaping holes" in the report presented by Mr. Getty.

Provincial New Democratic Party Leader Grant Notley has said the government exhibited "an inexcusable abuse of power" by acquiring the airline through an order in-council that changed the regulations of the Financial Administration Act.

And Alberta Liberal Leader Nick Taylor has called for a judicial inquiry into the purchase.

The government tabled Wednesday a series of documents on the purchase that were so extensive the page boy could hardly carry the entire load.

Mr. Getty reiterated earlier statements that none of the few persons who had advance knowledge of the purchase attempt had any shares registered in the Vancouver-based airline or any beneficial interest in PWA.

The minister said only cabinet ministers, two officers of National Trust Co., which acted as agent for the purchase, the government's solicitor, the deputy provincial treasurer and five members of the cabinet secretariat knew of the purchase plans ahead of time.

Mr. Getty defended the price paid by the government — $13 per common share and $52 for preferred shares — by saying that Canada Trust Co., controllers of a major block of shares, told Alberta's agent the province's offers of $10.50 or $11.50 a share were too low. The company mentioned $15, he added.

Mr. Clark told the legislature certain aspects of Mr. Getty's report differed from versions given previously by government officials.

The Social Credit house leader said in an interview Wednesday, before the legislature began its sitting, he has information "that shows the government's claim that it purchased PWA to look after the export trade was a fabricated lie."

Introducing: 19" Sony Trinitron® Colour TV.

Is it a good buy at $800*?
Ask your neighbourhood Sony owner.

Simulated picture

Sony Trinitron is also available in 17", 15", 12", 9" and 5" screen sizes.

Just say: "How's the colour?"

And anybody who now owns a 5", 9", 12", 15" or 17" Sony Trinitron will tell you this:

"The only way my Sony colour picture could get better would be to get bigger."

Now it's bigger.

Sony's superbly sharp, bright picture comes from the unique Trinitron system. It has one big colour electron gun that needs just one lens — the colour beams come through the centre of this big lens, the most distortion-free part. And an exclusive Aperture Grille that fills the screen with colour in unbroken lines, instead of dots or dashes.

And for the 19", we've improved this already-superior system by introducing a new, 114° deflection, wide-angle picture tube. It delivers the brightest, sharpest colour picture that has ever been seen on a Sony.

You also get a two-year total guarantee — picture tube, all parts, all labour unconditionally covered for two full years, subject only to the industry's standard clauses.

We can offer this unusual guarantee because of our long experience with solid state construction. While other manufacturers are just starting to feature "solid state," Sony has always been 100% solid state – every colour set we've ever sold in Canada.

Exclusive one-gun Trinitron system; new wide-angle picture tube; two-year total guarantee; all-solid-state reliability; 19" screen ... you're getting more for your money.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A man given a jail sentence Wednesday morning of two years less a day for seven offences pleaded guilty to five more at the afternoon session so he could serve his term in a federal penitentiary.

Daniel Bradley Cain, 19, of no fixed address, told Judge William Ostler in provincial court he wanted to go to a penitentiary rather than a provincial jail because he would get better treatment for his heroin problem and could learn a trade.

Ostler said it is difficult sending a person of Cain's age to penitentiary, but thought the decision was wise.

Prosecutor Gordon Macdonald said the Crown was unaware of the offences before the court in the afternoon until Cain phoned RCMP during the lunch hour.

The offences concerned breaking into Victoria Airport Travelodge, 2280 Beacon, Oct. 18 and stealing $225; entering the premises of Dr. H. J. Portelance, 1920 Sooke, Dec. 30, and taking $1; breaking into the Juan de Fuca Sporting Goods, 1918 Sooke, Dec. 30, and stealing $22 and an adding machine; breaking into Madsen Motors, 2691 Sooke, Dec. 18, but stealing nothing, and breaking into Buckerfield's in Parksville June 30 and taking $91 from a safe.

The offences on which he was sentenced in the morning concerned five counts of breaking into Victoria premises and committing theft in September and October, as well as stealing a motor vehicle in Sidney Oct. 18 and failing to remain at the scene of an accident three days later.

He pleaded guilty to the offences Tuesday.

An 18-year-old who received a four-month jail term Oct. 16 for a break-in was given an aditional two months to serve when sentenced Wednesday for another break-in.

Thomas Friel, of no fixed address, who received the four-month sentence for breaking into a Russell Street residence Sept. 16, received the extra time for breaking into the Capital Market, 50 West Burnside, Oct. 1 and stealing groceries worth $10.86.

A 21-year-old woman was given a suspended sentence and 18 months' probation for 13 counts of obtaining goods from Victoria stores with worthless cheques from Victoria stores.

Margaret Burns, address not known, pleaded guilty Oct. 9 to the offences, which occurred in May, June and September.

Goods purchased were worth $199.

Judge Edmond St. Jorre noted Burns did not have a criminal record, but warned her, "If you ever come back before me you can expect a jail sentence."

★ ★ ★

Sidney Blair Rhodes, 17, of 1629 Burton, was remanded for sentencing to Nov. 7 after he pleaded guilty to six counts of break, entry and theft in Saanich.

Two of the offences were breaking into the Cedar Hill Golf Club premises twice the same day.

He entered the premises with a juvenile Oct. 19 and stole money and goods worth $84. He and the juvenile returned later and took $8 in cash, food and cigarettes.

The other charges related to breaking into three garages in October and into the Hillside Dairy Queen, 1605 Hillside, Oct. 13.

★ ★ ★

Picking up a $21 dress in Eaton's, 1150 Douglas, on Tuesday, putting it in a bag then asking for it to be refunded resulted in a 19-year-old woman being fined $200 for theft.

Rex Howard Thomson, 49, of 434 West Burnside, was fined $200 for shoplifting a book worth $7.50 Sept. 20, from The Bay.

He had $150 in his possession when apprehended.

★ ★ ★

Frederick James Lord, of Orlando, Fla., was given a one-day jail term for possessing cannabis resin. He had spent two nights in jail since his arrest.

★ ★ ★

Fines totalling $950 were given to Arthur Desmond Spelman for five driving offences.

Spelman, 22, of 1010 Russell, was fined $400 for dangerous driving, $250 for driving without insurance, another $250 for not having a driver's certificate, $25 for misues of licence plates and another $25 for not having a driver's licence. He was also banned from driving for six months.

The charges were laid after police stopped Spelman shortly after midnight Sept. 5 for driving around city streets at speeds reaching 50 miles an hour.

ILLEGAL ALIEN CHARGES EASED

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. immigration service has told its agents to forget about pressing charges against illegal aliens picked up by local authorities.

Immigration commissioner Leonard Chapman's order was part of a broad effort to relieve the agents of some routine duties and focus the agency's strength on major investigations.

The instructions took effect Sept. 30.

In the Sept. 30 order, Chapman told agents that in most cases they should no longer divert manpower from major investigations to travel to local police stations to pick up illegal aliens apprehended by local authorities.

The impact of the change will strike largely in the southwest where an increasing number of illegal aliens are arriving from Mexico.

Boston Violence Flares Again

BOSTON (UPI) — Scattered fighting flared in racially troubled South Boston Wednesday following 10 days of relative calm.

A half-dozen scuffles erupted between black and white high school students and a black man was pulled from a truck and beaten by four whites.

One girl at South Boston High School was arrested for possession of a knife despite the second day of police using metal detectors to keep weapons out of the schools.

Officials said the scuffles involved "pushing, shoving and some punching." They said a teacher's aide was hit in the face during one scuffle but did not require hospital treatment.

The violence was the worst since early last week, when fightening among students at Hyde Park High School prompted Gov. Francis W. Sargent to place three units of the Massachusetts National Guard on standby alert.

Sargent said Sunday that since then the city had been "relatively calm."

Only minor incidents were reported Monday, and on Tuesday there were no school-related arrests or injuries for the first time since classes began Sept. 12 under a court-ordered desegregation plan.

A total of 18,000 students are to be bused under the plan that has sparked widespread turmoil and high absenteeism at the schools. Attendance increased very slightly Wednesday to 76.8 per cent.

'Have a Say'

They Believe in Getting People Involved At James Bay's Feisty Community School

By PETE MEDWID
Times Staff

The James Bay Community School is more than a building with lights burning at night.

To Brian Wile, assistant to the principal—curriculum, it's a viable alternative to what we are doing in our schools today:

"I believe in the point that it's your kid I'm teaching and you should have a say.

"As well, I'm a professional and I have an expertise you don't have and I should have some say . . . let's get together."

To Janey Allan, assistant to the principal — community school, it's getting the adult and child into the school and the school into the community:

"We'll help identify the needs and wants of the community; then, on a low-key level we'll assist in the development of that need; it's getting people involved in what they want to do."

To principal David Allan (no relation to Janey), it's the bringing together of a strong staff and using that staff in and out of the classroom:

"We must work closely with the community. We've had a case involving one family where 24 different people were giving them advice — one the welfare worker; another the probation worker, and so on; it's the professionals getting their act together and working as one."

This, basically, is what is happening at James Bay Elementary — Victoria's first effort at developing a community school; one that's fully integrated and involved with every aspect of community life whether its health, welfare, recreational or educational.

The idea started three years ago when David Allan and others in James Bay explored the idea of a school responsive to the needs of a community.

It took on new dimensions a year later when Wile joined the team . . . a person disenchanted with his role as a vice-principal in a "traditional" school. He now devotes up to 50 per cent of his day developing a curriculum meaningful to James Bay students.

And now Janey Allen is on the scene. She came at the beginning of this term after obtaining her master's degree in community education.

"Fourteen or so years ago it was easy to teach. It was all in a big book and a teacher knew from day to day what he was going to be doing.

"Now there is resource material coming off the printing presses every month. Teachers have more freedom today but they need someone in my field to help them prepare the curriculum."

An illustration was last year when Wile and teachers took 30 or 40 hours to develop a new language arts program for James Bay. The old program was not meeting the needs of the students from James Bay. Because time was made available to him, Wile was able to come up with a program liked by both pupils and the teachers.

Wile sees the community school idea spreading but only if the school and the community "grow into it."

Wile says the school has received total support from the school board although there is the odd administrative and elected official who disagrees with the James Bay project.

"They're the conservative element and what frightens them is the giving away, on the surface at least, the powers that Dave Allan has given me.

"That makes them nervous. They ask 'what the hell are you guys doing down there'?"

The support is there . . . financially and otherwise but the day of reckoning is coming.

Wile says the school is in a preferred financial and staffing situation in the city.

"There are others doing the same kinds of things we are but without the community school banner or the extra $60,000 we've received from the board.

"Somebody is going to say let's take a look at what you are doing with that $60,000."

As well as teachers and an extra vice-principal, James Bay has one full-time and one half-time learning assistance teachers; two full-time teacher aides with a third to be hired; two community school workers who will be looking after the evening and weekend programs; a child care worker hired through a $500 a month human resources branch grant; and a full time library-media director.

Janey Allan has had a tremendous response to her part of the program. A community school council with representation from teachers, parents and others has been set up.

It's this group which will come up with some of the ideas on what the school should attempt to do within the community.

For the family as a group there is volleyball matches and folk dancing.

Is there a danger of community enthusiasm for the school and its plans falling off?

Says Janey: "If there's no meaningful involvement . . . something like the old PTA type of thing and there is a falling off of interest this then tells us something about our program.

"It will mean we will have to take a look at it . . . both professionally and from the community . . . and come up with something the community really wants."

Janey sees the community school operating on a seven-day, 12 month operation. There are plans afoot for before and after-school activities for children whose parents are working and she sees the time when there will be a full program on weekends.

The school itself uses two types of teaching methods — open space and closed classrooms.

Out of a meeting held in April of 1972 between the school board, Victoria city council and the community, the idea for a community school was planted.

This month, with the last of the students moved from South Park to the enlarged James Bay, the community school concept is in full bloom.

Item: A disturbing, sobering report from Britain today under the by-line of Cecil Porter which tells of the astonishing illiteracy in a nation that most of us consider the most literate on earth.

Apart from those adults unable to read and write the report notes that some 12 per cent of all 15-year-olds suffer the same fate, a sort of twilight zone in communication.

The report puts a good deal of the blame on television and goes on: "One powerful reason is that TV is helping to breed thousands of children who may never be able to read properly. Already many youngsters of 11 are being found to have reading ages less than those of six-year-olds. They are backward because of a bookless home environment dominated entirely by TV, radio and pop records . . . almost all the communication in which the children are involved is oral, gestural and pictorial . . . reading is encountered mainly as a chore during school lessons."

So far as I know there's been no similar study made among young Canadians, but I'm convinced the problem is as great or greater in this country and further complicated by the fact that, unlike Britain, we have two television networks that seem mindless of quality programming and social values.

If we have the rate of illiteracy that's documented in the case of Britain, as I strongly suspect, along with the distortions of reality that we see nightly on our tiny screens, this may just be a national problem that will dwarf inflation, unemployment or any other recognizable roadblock to a bright future.

Item: My wife and daughter home today from an auction sale in Duncan and I watched them, speechless, while they unloaded the parts of the most decrepit, ancient brass bed I have ever seen, it being instantly consigned to a dark corner of the basement.

The giggling and the exchange of congratulations, the general air of euphoria, as they handled this wretched, pitting monstrosity from a bygone era caused me to marvel again at the strange ways of the antique-lover, a condition, that, sooner or later, seems to aflict nine out of 10 females of the world.

We now have a collection of assorted chests, tables, rocking chairs, kerosene lamps, wagon wheels, basins and mugs, brass plates and other bric-a-brac and doo-dads from the past that represents, to my way of thinking, a staggering investment. Their interest in almost anything that was outmoded 30 or 40 years ago can only be described as insatiable. They'll travel a hundred miles, if necessary, to view a dining room suite that has been in a farmhouse through three generations.

The astonishing part of all this — and perhaps the reason why I remain speechless — is the verifiable fact that there's not a single piece of this junk that hasn't doubled or trebled in value in the past two years. Who would believe that an elephant's foot umbrella stand, a thing that no sane man would allow within 10 miles of his home, isn't to be had these days for under $300?

Item: A wonderful, if brief, report in on the CP teletype today about the contest they held in Edmonton to find a new name for the Edmonton Coliseum. Seems the Edmonton Exhibition Association offered $1,000 and a free trip to Spokane's Expo as prizes. There were more than 1,500 entries. The winning name? The Edmonton Coliseum.

Item: To lunch today with Walter Boyd, a visiting San Francisco newsman with whom I've shared several assignments, and he tells me that the prevailing mood of people in his part of the country is intense soul-searching.

There was, says he, a brief period of relief when President Nixon resigned, but the significant aftermath of the Watergate disclosures and the Nixon tapes has been a torment of self-examination to find out if these were the doings of a few rogues in the White House or whether they reflect American life in general.

"Many of the people involved in Watergate have blamed the system, the need for success or power, the driving ambition that's always been a proud part of our politics and private lives," Boyd says. "Now there's a great body of Americans asking themselves if our form of capitalism is venal or whether the blame can be put on a few of Nixon's men. You hear talk about political integrity, about personal honesty. You don't hear about it here, but there's a national inquest going on."

If he's right — and I've never known him to be wrong — Nixon's going may be a great thing for the United States.

Stations Polluters—Pollen

Mayor's Words 'Exceed Thoughts'

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen indulged in some verbal snipping Wednesday, picking off a succession of targets including Victoria's radio stations, which he likened to air polluters, the city's only television station and the Canadian Radio-Television commission.

But Pollen had some of the fire returned by CRTC chairman Pierre Juneau when he appeared before the commission's hearing in Vancouver as an intervener in licence renewal applications by four Victoria broadcasting outlets: CHEK-TV and radio stations CKDA, CFMS-FM and C-FAX.

Juneau told the mayor he took "exception" to Pollen's remarks about the commission, and added that in conversations with Pollen that day he had noticed that "your words sometimes exceed your thoughts."

Earlier, Pollen had strongly criticized the CRTC for not sitting in Victoria to hear the Victoria applications. He also launched a general indictment against broadcasting standards in the capital city, excluding the FM station from his charges but including the other Victoria AM station, CJVI.

Pollen asked the commission to renew the licences for two years only, rather than the five-year periods the stations have requested.

"I would like to see this commission command or direct the three AM stations in Victoria to strongly deemphasize their strident commercialism and direct them to play down their external advertising, including the use of mobile broadcasting in commercial stores . . . to stop giveaway programs that debase radio advertising," he said.

He also urged that the CBC establish an AM radio outlet in Victoria, rather than relegate it "to the obscurity of FM."

But with regard to television, the mayor said a CBC station in Victoria would be no improvement on the present "insignificant" performance of CHEK-TV. He said CBC Television copies commercial television and called CBC-TV "One of the dismal failures of Canadian broadcasting."

What Victoria needs, said Pollen, is a television outlet modelled on the Public Broadcasting Service in the United States—something to give "intellectual sustenance" to the people of his city.

During the hearing, commission chairman Juneau disclosed the provincial government has asked that the only unused VFH (very high frequency) channel in the Vancouver-Victoria area, channel 10, be reserved for government use.

CHEK wants to drop its CBC affiliation and join the CTV network, but cannot do so until the CBC has its own TV outlet in Victoria. Representatives of CHEK and the CBC testified that exhaustive tests show that Channel 10 is the most feasible channel for a CBC Victoria station.

The CRTC's decision on all applications will be announced at some later date.

Ferry Decision Near?

A meeting in Seattle tonight may decide the fate of the Canadian Pacific's Princess Marguerite.

A CP Rail spokesman said today a company official will meet an "interested group" in Seattle tonight but would give no names.

However, Ron Mullins, general manager of Westours Ind. of Seattle, is leading a bid to buy the Marguerite and reinstate her on the Victoria - Seattle ferry run.

Maritime Museum board trustee James McCrossan contacted Maple Shipping Co. Ltd. of Vancouver today in an effort to have the Marguerite's sale stalled. McCrossan hopes to raise enough interest to have "commercial interests" join museum officials in a bid on the vessel.

McCrossan said the Marguerite could be used as a combination of maritime museum, restaurant and shops.

The CP Rail spokesman said, "There will be no special delay made for anybody."

Mayor Peter Pollen said Wednesday the museum has shown "a total lack of initiative" in not raising funds but relying on government agencies.

It has been announced the museum's society will go into liquidation Dec. 31. It has been notified it has to vacate the Bastion Square building in March.

UBC Man Named Conciliator

University of B.C. commerce professor W. T. Stanbury has been appointed conciliator for contract talks between teachers and school boards in six lower Island school districts.

Stanbury's appointment follows the abortive appointment of Victoria lawyer Louis Lindholm who is out of the country for several months.

As conciliator, Stanbury will try to bring together teachers and school trustees in the six districts in hopes of reaching a contract agreement before the Nov. 15 deadline.

Provincial legislation requires districts which have not settled by that date to go to binding arbitration.

FOURTH FIRE IN 9 DAYS

Firemen were called Wednesday for the fourth time in nine days to put out a fire in a garbage container at Douglas and Yates.

The container is beside a fire alarm box.

A spokesman said it was not known whether the fires have been set or caused by cigarette butts.

It's Cheaper by Helicopter

By ELEANOR BOYLE
Times Staff

Cattle Point's winding road is barricaded several times weekly for use as a helicopter pad.

Bundles of supplies are loaded into nets hung from a federal Ministry of Transport helicopter that takes off from the pad alongside Oak Bay's Beach Drive and heads for nearby Discovery Island.

But one day this week the order was for lumber and cement for construction of a new lighting plant foundation on the island.

On the foundation will rest two new diesel engines replacing the 14-year-old machines now operating the lighthouse beacon and all electrical facilities on Discovery.

"I haven't got enough power to run the station," said lightkeeper Sholto Fox, because the present engines are inadequate.

The 12 horsepower, 5 kilowatt engines will be retired, in favor of 18 horsepower, 15 kilowatt engines.

Fox hopes to see the new diesels operating by Nov. 15.

Helicopter supply delivery is normally chosen over delivery by water, although the island is approachable by boat, unlike some of the storm-lashed islands on the northern B.C. coast.

Trips by helicopter are less trouble and expense because of the manpower involved in transportation of supplies in MOT's large ships.

The helicopter does not, however, deliver to Trial Island lightstation, off Beach Drive, because its keepers bring in their own food and materials by small boat.

Ask the Times

Q: Could you give me some information on beachcombing for logs? Where do industries buy salvage logs? Is a licence required to do the work? A. P. R.

A: Log salvagers must have licences to work in public waters, and they are obtained from the B.C. Forest Service. Once a log is recovered from the beach it must be returned to the company that lost it, identifiable by a stamp on the log itself. Prices vary according to the market. Logging company officials asked to comment on your question said the work can be profitable if salvagers have capital to start with, know the local waters and something of navigation, and like hard work.

Q: Who should I contact regarding the practice of driving new cars from Windsor across Canada? A.N.

A: It is a common practice whereby a person may drive a vehicle west but must pay the cost of the gas. Once in Windsor, just phone the major car dealers. They'll line you up with a car that needs to be transported.

WILLIAM HEAD PRISONERS DONATE TOYS

There's no shortage of toys now at the Victoria West day care centre on Raynor Avenue. This week inmates at William Head penitentiary donated a box full of toys they had repaired. The broken toys were donated to the inmates by stores and others in the Greater Victoria area. Helping the children unpack the toys is Lora McDiarmid, in charge of the centre. (John McKay photo.)

New Executive

Despite a poor turnout, the Gordon Head Community Association this week elected a new executive and made plans to carry on activities in the hall on Tyndall Avenue.

New officers are: Doug Wilson, president; Doug Davidson, vice-president; Mary Wilson, secretary-treasurer; Isobel Farmer, Barbara McKaskell and Gary Clouston, directors; and B. Williamson, Betty Smith and Becky Groves, trustees.

There is a need for more people to volunteer to serve on the executive and newcomers to the Gordon Head area are welcome.

The community hall has been in operation for more than 80 years and has been "home" to cubs, scouts, brownies and guides in the area.

The executive decided to go into debt to rewire the building. Main source of revenue is from rental of the hall.

There are card parties and dances held the last Saturday of each month. About 130 families are now members.

View Royal Recycling Gets Seven Volunteers

View Royal's recycling project will continue to be held on the first and third Saturdays of the month. This was indicated this week at a meeting of the View Royal Ratepayers' Association when seven people stood up to volunteer.

The response came when president Tony Miller made an appeal for someone to "sacrifice an hour or two to keep the project alive."

Several said that on many Saturdays only Miller has shown up to load the truck and if volunteers failed to respond the project would be abandoned.

The meeting unanimously opposed Capital Region plans for industrial development on Admirals Road. Miller, in calling for a strong condemnation of the plan, said residents did not want "a British Columbia Forest-type operation in our back yard."

Pat Massy, View Royal director on the regional board who spoke out against the idea Tuesday at the public hearing, said the ratepayers favor light industry but this was ignored when the plan was drawn up.

Massy said the regional plan "takes precedent" over community plans and that View Royal and Royal Oak were the only two areas to be singled out by the region for future industrial development.

The meeting also went on record as opposing any moving of oil and gas storage tanks from the Victoria West shoreline to their side of Esquimalt Harbor.

The meeting discussed, to some length, the sewer referendum now cancelled by the Regional board. The ratepayers will once again ask the region and the provincial government for full disclosure of facts before any vote is sought on installation of sewers.

It was pointed out by many speakers that some sections of view Royal should be sewered because there is a problem with faulty septic tanks but that not all of View Royal needs sewering.

They cited excessive costs to residents if all of View Royal is sewered.

MLA Jim Gorst touched on the subject and said he will discuss with provincial ministers alternative means to sewers and to dumping untreated sewerage into the sea.

He also said the regional board "seems to have tremendous powers. I am the elected provincial member and I don't understand why they should have more power than myself."

He said he will talk to Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer to see what arrangements could be made to see that View Royal is kept informed on matters concerning them — amalgamation as well as sewering.

POLICE KEPT CLOSE EYE ON QUEBEC TERRORISTS

PARIS (Reuter) — French police allowed two Quebec separatist kidnappers to remain in France during Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's official visit here this week — but they had to report to police every three hours, police sources said today.

The sources said Jean Marc Carbonneau and Jacques Lanctot, who took part in the kipnapping of British diplomat James Cross in Montreal four years ago, were not sent to Corsica during the Trudeau visit as they had been during a recent trip here by Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa.

Nor would they be transferred again to Corsica when Bourassa pays his next visit here in December, the sources added.

French police tactics now are to keep the kidnappers and their former accomplices under close observation rather than moving them from the mainland each time a Canadian leader arrives.

Interior Minister Michel Poniatowski stated earlier this week that the Quebec activists, who took refuge here during the summer, would not be expelled from France as long as they refrained from political activity here.

Canada Eyes Others' NATO Plans

BRUSSELS (CP) — Faced with the pressures of inflation, the defence spending of other NATO countries will have an important impact on Canada's contribution to the alliance, Prime Minister Trudeau said today.

Government officials said Trudeau also told a NATO council meeting here that cutbacks on spending in other countries would make it tougher on Canada to maintain its contributions to the alliance.

Canada's contribution to NATO amounts to 5,000 men based in southern Germany.

Defence spending in Canada accounts for about 2.1 per cent of the gross national product. An informed source said that average spending in NATO countries is bout five or six per cent of the gross national product.

Defence Minister James Richardson said recently inflation will place constraints on the Canadian defence budget.

Canada-ECC Trade Hopes Rise

By DAVID MACDONALD
Special to the Times

BRUSSELS — Canada's hopes of achieving a trade agreement with the European Economic Community (Common Market) were given a lift Wednesday when the Belgian prime minister said his country will support and help Canada in its negotiations.

He said: "Belgium supports Canada in its efforts to establish a contractual link with the European community. We think it's a good thing to have this special relationship with the Common Market."

"In our eyes, it's part of the foreign relations of the Common Market. In Canada's negotiations with the market we think it must be a broader tie than only a commercial one, so that investment and raw materials and such things will also be discussed."

The positive tone of the Belgian leader comes as an encouraging follow-up to the sympathetic neutrality of the French government as related by Canadian government officials earlier this week.

At his press conference in Paris yesterday, Trudeau said he had made our point of view known to the French on the proposed trade agreement with the Common Market, but said "I wouldn't say France will be fighting for us."

If the French really plan to take a neutral approach to this issue then this is a positive improvement since it had been generally believed among some of the other Common Market countries that before the Trudeau visit the French had reservations about the Canadian approach to the market.

Tindemans said Belgium also wants to expand its own trade with Canada and is sympathetic to Canada's wish to export finished and semi-finished goods instead of simply raw materials. He was in favor of a better balance in Belgian-Canadian trade and said that as far as increasing trade is concerned "we will do everything to achieve this objective."

He also said that he and Trudeau had agreed to accelerate cultural relations especially in view of Canada and Belgium sharing the common factor of having two linguistic communities. He admitted that the results were not as good as we would have liked from the first Canadian-Belgium cultural agreement, signed in 1967.

In Paris, the prime minister said "we have turned a page in France-Canadian relations."

Olympics Security Shared

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Canadian embassy has confirmed reports that Canada is consulting "other governments" in efforts to prevent a Munich-style massacre at the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal.

In a terse response to a published report that Canada through the United States state department, had asked help from the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) and the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), an embassy spokesman said:

"All Canadian authorities concerned with the Olympics are giving the matter of security top priority.

"In this context, it is perfectly natural that consultation should take place with governments through established channels."

Security arrangements at the last Summer Games — in 1972 at Munich — were criticized after Arab terrorists infiltrated the athletes' village and held hostage almost the entire Israeli team.

In that action and in a further incident at Furstenfeldbruk airport, 11 Israeli sportsmen were slain.

The Canadian team headquarters at Munich, less than 50 yards from the Israeli quarters, was evacuated and turned into a police command post.

The Washington Post, in the first of two articles from Montreal, said Wednesday that an unidentified state department source confirmed that the Canadian government has asked for help and that liaison has been made with the FBI, but not with the CIA.

A spokesman for the external affairs division of the FBI would say only: "We would make available advice and assistance to Canada if asked."

First there was Quasar's famous works in a drawer, the system that uses modules to make color TV more reliable than ever before.
Then came Insta-Matic tuning. This advance lets you adjust brightness, color intensity, contrast and tint with the touch of a single button. And once tuned the way you like, your Quasar picture stays the way you like, regardless of program or channel.
Now there is Super Insta-Matic. This is available on selected 1975 Quasar Color TV sets and it may be the most exciting Quasar idea yet. With Quasar Super Insta-Matic a magic eye on the front of the set senses when room light changes. If you turn on a light, or if sunlight comes into the room, the picture automatically adjusts. It adjusts color intensity, contrast and brightness without your even being aware of it. The result is a constantly beautiful Quasar Color TV picture that's as clear and easy to see when the room is bright as when it's dim.

Indians Emerge Smiling

Non-status Indians emerged from a meeting with provincial cabinet ministers Wednesday happy and confident they have established "new lines of communication with the government."

The B.C. Association of Non-Status Indians (BCANSI) has constantly opposed the system under which all Indian matters have been channeled through Human Resources Minister Norm Levi.

Premier Barrett and a group of cabinet ministers have now promised BCANSI members they can work through individual government departments like all British Columbians.

"We weren't happy working with the minister of welfare," said BCANSI president Fred House, "because people always associate us with welfare and we want to get away from that."

"We are very, very pleased with the meeting we had with the premier," he said. "We are at the stage where we have a working relationship established with the government."

Good relations are needed because BCANSI, which represents about 65,000 of B.C.'s 110,000 native people, wants to embark on a full economic development program designed to make the native people self-sufficient.

BURGLARS LEFT BEHIND $21M IN VAULT THEFT

CHICAGO (AP) — Burglars who got away with nearly $4 million in cash from an armored car company left more than $21 million because they didn't have time or the manpower to move it, a police commander said Wednesday.

Cmdr. Victor Vrdolyak said the total loss from the weekend burglary at the Armored Express Corp. was $3,931,452 in small, hard-to-trace bills. It was the largest cash haul on record in U.S. history.

Earlier Wednesday, three persons were questioned for several hours and authorities recovered an empty van in the area they said may have been used in the theft.

One of those questioned was an unidentified security guard on duty at the time of the robbery who failed to pass a lie detector test. The three men were released after questioning.

Vrdolyak said the $25 million was in $1, $5, $10, $20, $50 and $100 bills, and it would have taken at least five or six persons to take it all.

The thieves attached a fuse to gasoline in the vault to try to cover their traces, but the fire went out quickly because of lack of oxygen.

Debtors Get Counselling

Victoria's Community Action group has been given a $7,500 boost from the province to help counsel over-committed debtors.

The grant was announced Tuesday by Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Yeung who said the money would be used for "counselling and information programs with special focus for those on low incomes."

Money has also been alloted through the grant for Community Action to improve its office and secretarial services.

Ambulance Unit Recruits Six For Training

Six young members will be enrolled in the St. John Ambulance Brigade in Victoria as volunteers in emergencies.

Sharon Cooke, Kathryn Hewson, Margaret Hind, Theresa Homan, Theresa Morgan and Teresa Shields are 10- to 14-year-olds trained in first aid and nursing who will become Brigade members at a ceremony Wednesday at the organization's office, 941 Pandora.

Counterfeit Warning Out

Victoria businesses have been warned by police to be on the alert for a new series of counterfeit $50 and $100 bills circulating in Vancouver, but not yet here.

The bills, made in the east, are a 1954 series, Vancouver police said.

REVUE NEXT WEEK

Two revue performers who are tops among Canadian entertainers and highly appreciated in the U.S. are coming to Victoria.

They are Tom Kneebone — called by the Financial Post "an inspired comedian" — and blonde singer Dinah Christie.

The show they are bringing to the Royal Theatre Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, under the sponsorship of Bastion Theatre, celebrates two of the great creators of comedy and melody in this century — Noel Coward and Cole Porter.

The first part of the program is dedicated to Coward's sparkling works and music, the second to Porter's. Accompanying the performance will be the dean of Canadian popular music in revue, Howard Cable.

The show has toured Canada and the United States to general acclaim by leading critics.

This show is the first of three bonus productions Bastion Theatre will bring to Victoria this season.

Curtain time is 8:30 p.m.

Be A Volunteer, Students Advised

Students applying to study at University of Victoria's new school of social welfare next year are being asked to get some first-hand experience in volunteer work now.

"We're trying to get students in touch with volunteer agencies in town now so they can get experience 'and find out if they really like working with people," said Dr. Betty Kennedy, who chairs a UVic committee setting up the school.

She said the university has already received 60 applications from students, double the number that will be handled by the school when it opens next year.

Candidates for the school's director are being interviewed and a decision on who fills the post should be made by January, she said.

In the meantime, prospective students are being interviewed by special school consultant Garth Homer to insure that students chosen can maintain a "certain academic standard."

"We'll have to try to choose sensitive, mature people who can handle being in a problem situation a great deal of the time," said Dr. Kennedy.

Robot Will Never Replace Man, Says Auto Parts Manufacturer

TORONTO (CP) — "They thought robots would replace men — but they can't and never will," says Bill Thompson, vice-president of marketing for Hayes Dana Ltd., of Thorold, Ont.

"The publicity surrounding robots has been highly overrated," Thompson said in a recent interview. People expect too much from them and they're too expensive.

Thompson, a Canadian auto parts manufacturer, has just reached the end of the second stage of a partly government-financed project making the company one of the first in Canada to build and market industrial robots.

Robots should be used to help people rather than replace them. "You can get the most sophisticated machine in the world," he said, "but you couldn't afford it. And no robot is ever going to replace skilled labor."

The world population of robots is 3,500. Canada has about 25 in operation, mostly involved in spot welding in the automotive field.

Industrial robots are not mechanical men. Usually stationary and consisting of a box-like base, the robot basically is a mechanical arm that can perform a variety of tasks and pick up as much as 300 pounds at a time.

Costing anywhere from $10,000 to $50,000, they usually have "brains" which can be programmed to make them do exactly what they are told but not think or make decisions.

They are installed mostly in toxic, dirty, hot or dangerous environments that few men can tolerate.

Richard Cheng, a Montreal researcher based at Concordia University, said in a telephone interview that Canada is "backwards" in robotics — the science of building robots — as far as other developed countries go.

But he's optimistic that robotics will have wider coverage than it has today.

"Sooner or later industry will run up against an acute labor shortage aggravated by high absenteeism and turnover," he said, "and business will accept that boring, tedious jobs will be ideal for robots."

Spending Hike Seen By U.S. Subsidiaries

WASHINGTON (CP) — Substantial increases in capital investment in the oil and chemical industries are expected to fuel a major jump in such investment by American-controlled subsidiaries in Canada in 1974 and 1975, the United States commerce department has reported.

In a semi-annual survey of American parent companies and their subsidiaries around the world, the department's monthly survey of current Business estimated that majority-owned affiliates of U.S. firms in Canada would spend 20 per cent more this year than in 1973 on property, plant and equipment.

In 1975, such spending is projected to increase a further 19 per cent in Canada, compared with a 14-per-cent jump in 1973 over the previous year.

In dollar figures, the affiliates in Canada, which spent $4.095 billion on capital investment in 1973, are projected to spend $4.923 billion in 1974 and $5.868 billion in 1975.

The figures for Canada in 1974 and 1975 are slightly below the projected rates for total investment by U.S. subsidiaries around the world. But because of the size of American investment in Canada, the dollar amounts forseen for Canada are higher than for any other single country.

The publication's report said inflation is the most important factor in the substantial increases, adding that "some foreign affiliates may also have accelerated their capital spending plans in anticipation of even higher future costs."

In Canada, capital spending by petroleum affiliates is expected to rise by 25 per cent in the current year and 38 per cent next year. The 1973 petroleum expenditures were $1 billion, with $1.253 billion forecast for 1974 and $1.734 billion for 1975.

From a figure of $346 million of capital spending in 1973, the chemical sector is expected to boost expenditures 50 per cent this year to $520 million, and a further 46 per cent next year to $761 million.

The whole manufacturing sector foresees a 21-per-cent increase in spending in 1974 to $2.122 billion from the 1973 figure of $1.752 billion, but with a smaller 14-per-cent increase in 1975 to $2.515 billion.

Swiss Firm Blossoms In B.C.

Swiss-based Sulzer Bros. (Canada) Ltd. has done $10 million worth of business in B.C. since locating an office in Vancouver six months ago.

The diversified heavy machinery and engineering firm spans most of Europe and North America including Mexico, besides having branches in South America, North and West Africa, the Middle East, South and Southeast Asia, Japan and Australia.

From its Canadian headquarters in Montreal, Sulzer has specialized in the pulp and paper, textile, power generation and shipbuilding industries. For the eight months ending Aug. 31, Sulzer (Canada) reports $80 million in orders, up $4 million from the 12 months ending Dec. 31, including an $8 million paperboard machine for Belkin Paperbound Ltd. mill in Bur-

Message Sealed Nazi Warship's Doom

LONDON (UPI) — The commander of the German battleship Bismarck radioed an exultant message to his home base in May, 1941, after escaping British pursuers in the North Atlantic.

He didn't know, but allied scientists had already cracked the super-secret code he was using. The message turned out to be his ship's death warrant.

Within hours, British warships with precise details of the Bismarck's position moved in and sent the German vessel to the bottom of the sea.

A former British intelligence officer, in a book published today, said the sinking of the Bismarck was one of a series of dramatic allied successes made possible by "the greatest intelligence triumph of all time."

Fred Winterbotham said the team that broke Germany's supposedly unbreakable "enigma" wartime code also revealed the axis strategy for the battle of El Alamein, led allied planes to the Peenemunde missile factory and played an important role in the Normandy landing.

"We knew where every German was and what he was going to do," Winterbotham told newsmen before the release of his book, "The Ultra Secret."

He said the book broke 30 years of official silence on the work of the ultra team, which intercepted practically every order transmitted by top Nazi leaders, including Adolf Hitler.

He quoted the late prime minister Winston Churchill as calling the Ultra team "my most secret source." The late Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower said Ultra's information "saved thousands of British and American lives."

The book said the German code was based on a set of electrically driven drums, which revolved at random and scrambled messages.

A similar set of drums at the receiving end could unscramble the signal — but the recipient had to change secret settings every 12 hours.

The Germans thought it was an unbeatable system, but Winterbotham thought otherwise.

He organized a team of electronics experts, mathematicians and chess masters to pick apart a German coding device stolen by Polish agents. The team then built a code-cracking machine.

He said the clash between the troops of Field Marshal Bernard Law Montgomery and Field Marshal Erwin Rommel at El Alamein was fought almost entirely on information provided by Ultra.

"Two weeks before the attack Rommel sent his Rome commanders his whole battle plan, down to the smallest detail," he said. "Montgomery knew it all — the number of tanks, amount of fuel, ammunition, everything."

Winterbotham said Ultra also gave Gen. Omar Bradley four days' notice of Hitler's attempt to drive allied forces into the sea after the Normandy invasion.

Mississippi Crude Leak

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — About 2,200 barrels of crude oil has leaked into the Mississippi River from a tanker which ran aground about 80 miles upriver from New Orleans.

Clean-up crews swept along the river trying to salvage some of the oil, which discolored the water downriver to New Orleans. The Coast Guard said winds and waves broke up the oil and left it in gobs along the riverbank.

The 807-foot Italian tanker Ercole ran aground about midnight Monday. The ship's operator said the impact caused the crude oil in the vessel's 14 tanks to surge and leak.

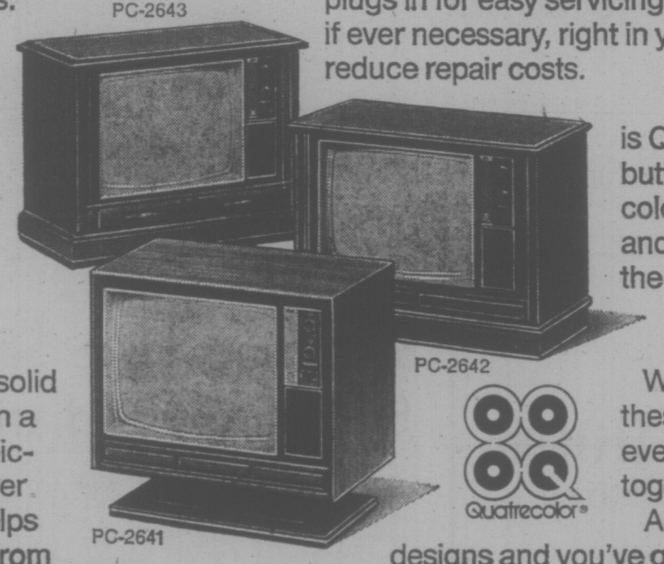
Perhaps our way works so perfectly because it's so uncomplicated. Every model in the Quatrecolor console TV line starts with four basic features.

First, the Ultra Pana-Matrix picture tube. It has a negative guard band black matrix screen and is driven by a powerful 30,000 volt chassis to give you sharp, bright pictures.

Then we add the dependability of 100% solid state circuitry. We put in a circuit that keeps the picture steady if your power fluctuates. One that helps keep out interference from other channels. And another to cut down interference from things like household appliances.



These and most other circuits that make up Panasonic Quatrecolor are grouped into 5 modules, our third feature. Each module plugs in for easy servicing or replacement, if ever necessary, right in your own home. To reduce repair costs.

The fourth feature is Q-Lock. A single button that keeps color, tint, contrast and brightness just the way you like it on every channel, automatically.

Add elegant cabinet designs and you've got Panasonic Quatrecolor consoles. See them at your Panasonic dealer today. You'll find they're beautiful to watch. And look at.

Campbell Insists Regional Plan Must Pass

If the regional development plan is stifled this year, it won't pass next year and the region will be left without any planning at all, Capital Region Board chairman Jim Campbell said Wednesday.

The regional plan came under fire at Wednesday's board meeting by regional directors who want acceptance of the plan delayed until various studies can be made on the desirability of moving a major portion of the population into the Highlands.

Saanich director Fred Severson asked for a full study on the costs of providing sewer and water services to the Highlands and Langford regional director Earl Pallister called for an environmental impact study in the Highlands.

Campbell told directors that taking the "potential urban" designation off the Highlands area in the regional plan would be "unnecessary and almost irresponsible."

He said the board had given approval in principle to developing the Highlands almost a year ago. The provincial government required that approval in principle before it would spend any public money on the land banking system in the Highlands, Campbell said.

"It wasn't until it became apparent that the Highlands development was a portion of the regional plan that would be challenged that there was any dissent from the board," he said.

The board will hold a special meeting Nov. 6 to consider amendments to the plan.

Tighter Checks After Insanity

Tighter and more-extensive evaluation procedures for criminal offenders suspected of psychiatric disturbance are being undertaken in B.C., Health Minister Dennis Cocke said today.

The case of a man who was charged with murder two days after his release from Riverview mental hospital has taught the province a "very difficult lesson and a very serious lesson," said Cocke.

The minister said he just completed a review of the case of Rodney Allen Kirkpatrick who was sent to Riverview Aug. 22 after he was judged insane and unfit to stand trial on a variety of charges, including possession of a dangerous weapon. He was then released by his physician Aug. 29 when he appeared to be sane and was charged a few days later with the Aug. 31 murder of a man in Yoho National Park in Colorado.

Cocke said the Kirkpatrick case was an especially difficult one because the man's characteristics seemed to change once he was inside Riverview.

The man was given lengthy evaluation, said Cocke, but the procedures will still have to be tightened to try to prevent a similar situation occurring again.

A second opinion will now be mandatory and "different kinds of stressful evaluation processes" will be used.

But the minister said there is "no absolute scientific way of judging a person's sanity and fitness."

Kirkpatrick is back in Riverview and is being thoroughly assessed again, said Cocke.

Weathership Statement Clarified

The federal government has given no assurance Victoria-based weatherships Quadra and Vancouver will not be pulled from duty, Dr. R. W. Stewart said today.

Clarifying a statement he made Wednesday, Stewart said he was speaking as a scientist, not a government representative, when he told reporters Wednesday the ships will continue their watches on Station Papa, 900 miles out in the Pacific, until at least 1982.

Stewart said he made the statement as chairman of the Global Atmospheric Research Program, which represents 10 countries. He said the scientists felt it was imperative to keep the two ships operating until then.

He said the United States had already withdrawn all its weatherships in spite of the fact they cannot be completely replaced by satellites.

"We have no assurance that the ships (Quadra and Vancouver) will not be withdrawn," Stewart said.

He added that decision would be made by the Atmospheric Environment Service, based in Toronto.

Stewart said the ships are "very expensive" to run and the AES would probably like to withdraw them in order to utilize their operating costs for other services.

Cars Cut To Size

The age of the small car has descended upon employees of the Capital Region District.

Starting Nov. 1, 1976, regional employees with large cars will no longer be given a bigger mileage allowance than those with smaller cars.

Until 1976, small car owners will get 15 cents a mile on regional board business, and large car owners will get 20 cents a mile, as long as they have owned their larger cars since before Oct. 1, 1074. An employee who buys a new car between now and Nov. 1, 1976, will get a small car rate, no matter what the size of the car.

The regional board's executive committee, which made the new mileage recommendations to the board, set the cut-off point between large and small cars at 2,600 pounds, the weight of medium-sized cars.

HIKERS NOT WANTED

The parks committee of the Capital Region Board will recommend that the Goldstream area of the Victoria watershed be closed to bikers and hikers.

Greater Victoria Water District commissioner Ron Upward told the committee the watershed is used every summer to meet peak loads and is the only alternative source of water for Victoria if an emergency arises with the Sooke Lake water supply. The committee earlier received requests from the public that the area be open for recreational use.

In other parks committee business, members recommended approval of a Local Initiatives Project under which inmates from William Head prison would clear trails and land for parking lots in East Sooke Park.

Isabel Craig Seeks Oak Bay Seat

Mrs. Isabel Craig, 62, of 2283 Musgrave, a leader in Oak Bay's recreation programs, will seek an aldermanic seat in the municipal election Nov. 16.

She filed papers today as a candidate for the one-year term on council brought about by the death of Ald. Harry Graham. Two other candidates, Capt. John Horne, a ship's pilot, and Godfrey Lomas, retired ship's master, are also seeking the seat.

Mrs. Craig is the recenlty retired recreation co-ordinator of Oak Bay. She held that post for seven years and was a volunteer member of the recreation commission for eight years prior to that.

Three other aldermanic seats for two-year terms will also be filled in the election. Aldermen Shirley Dowell, Douglas Watts and John Gault are all seeking re-election and Neil Swainson, a UVic political science professor, is challenging for one of the seats with a two-year term.

Anderson's Aide to Run

Kristianson, 34, is also assistant to the Liberal caucus.

He lives at 5055 Catalina Terrace, is married and has two school-age children.

He has a Ph D in political science and is a sessional lecturer at the University of B.C.

Evans Recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington Redskins have bolstered their injury-riddled running back corps by calling up Charlie Evans, who was on the injured reserve list with a pulled hamstring muscle. He replaces Larry Smith, who suffered a broken bone in his foot Sunday and was placed on the injured reserve list.

Names and Nostalgia; Flashback in History

Two links with the past were severed last week, and left behind were a handful of used memories. Tommy Burns and Ted Menzies passed away, and the mere mention of their names brings a touch of nostalgia. People had fun in their days too.

Tommy Burns was an always helpful engineer with the CPR on the Princess ships in the days of the triangle run between Vancouver, Seattle, and Victoria and the mid-night boats. He was an avid sportsman and, in later years instrumental in organizing Saturday trips to the land of the horsey set at Exhibition Park.

Nan, his first wife, will be recalled by many as the major domo of the old Arcade Bowling Alleys, and you're dated if you don't know where those alleys were.

Menzies was from the heyday of field lacrosse in our town, but in an interview a few years ago he said he preferred the box-type game. "It is rougher," he said then. "The board checking has to make it tougher and players have to be more nimble."

Which is indeed a tribute considering that Ted had 11 of his teeth knocked out in his first field lacrosse game after the First World War.

Ted was mostly associated with the JBAA club here, but also had time to help the strong Pat Bay Air Force team. Afterwards, he coached at Nanaimo. Besides, he was your agent's only boxla coach. He couldn't stand to see anyone standing around, just watching. So one night he tossed over a uniform and pads, and said: "get dressed."

That was it. The his first-game advice. "Don't let anyone go by you on the inside. Force him to the boards, then hammer him." Mission completed. Two minutes: Boarding. "I said 'hammer him' " was the next message.

So, it still works today.

Ted's Chosen Few

Ted may have been before his time, too. At least he was a semi-pro. He got paid for playing. It was in 1914 before the First World War and Ted, Lou MacDonald and Alex McDougall went to Winnipeg. "We were supposed to be amateurs but we got $150 a month," he said.

He had many favorites but his chosen few was a select group. "Bill Wilkes was the best I ever saw," he once said. His other latter-day picks were Arnold Ferguson, Bobby Allan and Jack Bionda. But now he's gone and simply: it's so long coach.

Meanwhile the mere mention of the midnight boat has to stir some memories. It was practically the only way to get to that great city on the coast before the advent of the B.C. Ferries.

Aboard ship, all sorts of things were often going on, especially on weekends when it was a floating mecca for athletes and sports fans. And quite often you might be asked to share your stateroom with a stranger even.

Which may or not have given rise to the suggestion that it wasn't until the midnight boats came off that sex education began in the schools.

Which brings to mind a story, told before, but bears repeating because it is typical of that era and unlikely to occur again.

Two sports fans who had never met previously were introduced while renewing acquaintances with two mutual friends in the stateroom of the mutual friends.

The two hosts, both jesters, by fact, and reputation, shall be called Tom because that was their name. Of the two visitors, one had a cabin, the other did not. This problem was soon solved, however, when an offer to share was accepted.

Two Jesters At Work

Meanwhile, libations were being prepared, awaiting only the arrival of the ship's steward, when one of the guests excused himself.

"Can I see you a moment," he said to one of the hosts. "How well do you know this guy?" he asked in the passageway. "I'm really not fussy about sharing my stateroom with a complete stranger."

"Well enough," said one Tom, who knew them both very well. "But just to be on the safe side why don't you leave your wallet with the purser?" (This was an accepted procedure of the day.)

And so the guest trundled off to the purser's office. Tom, snickering to himself, rejoined the group. But by now guest No. 2 was also concerned and he was asking the other Tom: "What's this guy like?"

The two Toms were in their glee, and this guest was told, in effect: "he's a pretty good fellow, but . . ."

Sure enough, this guest took the advice and sidled off to the purser's office as well to put his billfold in safekeeping.

About the time of his return, the cabin steward, heavily laden with goodies, showed up. Naturally, all four reached for their wallets.

But only two paid! And they were named Tom.

Reps' Goodwill Style Suits Rugby Visitors

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

Coach Donn Spence and the British Columbia Reps overdid the free enterprise stuff just a little bit at Royal Athletic Park Wednesday night—but the rugby goodwill was probably worth it.

After all, Spence made a decision, set the pattern and sent a crowd of almost 1,000 fans home knowing they had just seen the game at its brightest.

And he sent the carefree Tongan team off to meet Canada's national team in Vancouver Friday, happy in the knowledge that, after a disastrous tour of Britain, it had salvaged something at least on the way home.

The only thing Spence didn't do was send his own boys home knowing they had done their best and had just won an international exhibition rugby game.

What they had done was to follow instructions to "play a wide open, entertaining rugby game" and they did it; and it cost them a 19-16 decision.

The Tongans, making their first-ever trip to the Northern Hemisphere, arrived in Victoria the night before, weary from the flight over from Britain, where they were humiliated and won only once on a 10-match tour.

Spence noted then that the British teams had socked it to the Tongans in the forwards, where they are weakest, and kept the ball from their backs, where they are strongest. That, he said, wouldn't happen here.

It didn't either.

Right from the start, B.C., with nine Vancouver Island players aboard counting Blais McDonald who came on as a substitute for the injured Gary Johnston, showed it was out to run the ball and entertain

That was fine, as far as it went—but it went a little too far.

Like the Tongans, B.C. backs and forwards gaily combined in runs up and down the field and evn standoff-half Gilli Greig of Oak Bay switched from his usual kicking game to spin the ball almost every time.

B.C. built up a 4-0 lead on a thrilling run by winger Spence McTavish, which ended in a try but fell behind 6-4 when Kimipu Inoke scored and captain Sione Mafi converted.

afi kicked a first-half penalty goal but centre Jim Boivan dashed over for a try and Mel Reeves, the ex-St. Michael's University School and University of Victoria player who is now at UBC, converted it and booted a penalty goal to give B.C. a 13-9 lead at the interval.

B.C. got a glimpse of just what the tricky Tongan backs can do 11 minutes into the second half when centre Tali Kavapalu sped through for a try to make it 13-13.

Fully knowing this, Spence and his boys should have shut the door when Reeves kicked the go-ahead penalty goal for a 16-13 lead.

It was then that B.C. should have decided: that's enough of the entertainment stuff, let's close it up and hang on.

But they didn't; the frolic continued and Kavapalu did it to them again, eagerly snatching a loose ball and weaving his way through for a try under the posts in injury time, which Mafi converted.

They probably won't do the same thing to Canada at Brockton Oval Friday but even if they lose, they will go home with a 50-50 average on their two-game North American visit.

And for that much alone, says manager Lupeti Finau, they are delighted.

Gulls Use Flyers To Step Up

Juan de Fuca Gulls used Fuller Lake Flyers as a stepping stone to second place in the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League Wednesday.

In defeating Flyers 4-3 at Fuller Lake Arena, Gulls edged to within one point of front-running Victoria Nixons.

Cowichan Bairds missed a chance to keep pace with the Gulls by dropping a 4-3 decision to Nanaimo in an interlocking game with the North Island League entry. Buddy George's goal late in the third period beat Bairds.

Gerry Sihota, Mike Forrest and Mark Colombe scored for Cowichan.

Lakers Increase Margin

Undefeated Lake Cowichan padded its cushion atop the South Island Big Six Hockey League Wednesday.

The Lakers defeated James Bay Gulls 6-3 at Juan de Fuca Arena to move six points ahead of second-place Stocker North Americans.

Jim Peterson, Ed Croteau, Neil Saunders, Rod Hunter, Alvin White and Gus Ryan shared Lakers' goals while Dale McLaughlin, with two, and Doug Harding scored for the Gulls.

A's Trade Trio for Cub Belter

The world champion Oakland Athletics gave up three players Wednesday to acquire slugger Billy Williams from Chicago Cubs of the National Baseball League.

Relief pitchers Darold Knowles and Bob Locker, along with second baseman Manny Trillo, were dealt by the A's to get Williams, a 36-year-old outfielder-first baseman.

The deal appears a continuation of Chicago house-cleaning move designed to bring younger players into the line-up. First-stringers dealt away by the Cubs within the past year include third baseman Ron Santo, catcher Randy Huntley, pitcher Ferguson Jenkins and second-baseman Glenn Beckert.

Also in baseball, the owner of Baltimore Orioles has given a group seeking to keep the American League team in the Maryland city 30 days in which to come up with half of the $10 million it plans to pay for the club.

Jerold Hoffberger agreed Wednesday to give the group that time to collect $5 million from private investors. The remaining $5 million is expected to be raised through the sale of revenue bonds.

Hoffberger declared he would sell or move the team because Orioles have failed to draw more than one million fans in each of the last three years although Baltimore won divisional titles in 1973 and 1974.

Honest Bill Fires Three

By The Canadian Press

When a Rangers player scores his third goal in a game, New York fans usually litter the ice with hats to commemorate the feat sometimes called a hat trick.

When Bill Fairbairn scored his third New York goal in Wednesday night's 5-1 National Hockey League triumph over St. Louis Blues, a solitary, beat-up old cap made its way to the ice.

In a way, though, that was appropriate. Fairbairn is known as "an honest hockey player." No flashy moves, just determination and hard work.

Three other players got three goals each as Atlanta Flames whipped Detroit Red Wings 10-1, Montreal Canadiens edged Toronto Maple Leafs 3-2, Chicago Black Hawks defeated Washington Capitals 3-2, Boston Bruins and Pittsburgh Penguins 5-5 and Kansas City Scouts earned their first point with a 4-4 tie against California Golden Seals.

"It wasn't much of a hat trick," the quiet right-winger said. "The only goal that was any good was the second one."

Fairbairn's first shot had entered the St. Louis net after bouncing off the chest of Blues goalie Ed Johnston and hitting St. Louis defenceman Barclay Plager in the forehead. The third one also went in off a Blues defenceman.

But the second goal was the kind that brings fans to their feet. New York's Steve Vickers had the puck in the corner and fed it to Fairbairn about 20 feet in front of Johnston, who had no time to set for the right winger's rising wrist shot.

That gave the Rangers a 2-1 lead at 1:09 of the middle period, after the Blues' Billy Collins had tied the game with a shorthanded goal midway through the first period. Then Jerry Butler added a breakaway score, Vickers deflected a Walt Tkaczuk pass into the goal, and Fairbairn scored his third of the night.

"I never even scored three goals in the Central League," said Fairbairn, who added that he was just as happy the Rangers had given up only one goal as he was scoring three of his own.

"You can't fault the goalie," Fairbairn said, further belittling his effort. "One goes in off the defence, then another does. When I get a good, honest hat trick, then I'll have something to be really happy about."

Toronto coach Red Kelly said it was a "cheap" goal, scored by Yvon Lambert at 17:27 of the third period, that gave Montreal the victory over the Leafs.

Lambert had fired a weak shot from the corner that dribbled into the net off the heel of goalie Doug Favell's stick.

LION FACES MARIJUANA CHARGE

VANCOUVER (CP)—Middle linebacker Ray Nettles of British Columbia Lions has been charged with possession of marijuana and having care and control of a motor vehicle while impaired.

Nettles, 25, was arrested early today in a car on a downtown Vancouver street. He is to appear in court on both charges Tuesday.

Aeros Bow Again

By The Canadian Press

Houston Aeros opened defence of their World Hockey Association championship impressively enough two weeks ago but now they appear to be resting on their laurels.

The Aeros suffered their fourth straight loss Wednesday night, dropping a 5-4 decision to New England Whalers at Springfield, Mass.

In other action Wednesday, Vancouver Blazers, 6-0 losers to Houston in the opener a week ago, beat Cleveland Crusaders 4-1 and Quebec Nordiques whipped Michigan Stags 6-2.

Dunsmuir Survives

Cheryl Archer scored two minutes from the end Wednesday to give Dunsmuir a 1-0 win over St. Margaret's in a battle to decide the last of six Victoria berths for the Vancouver Island high school girls' field hockey championships.

Dunsmuir was to meet Claremont today in the deciding game of the special three-way playoff, arranged after the three schools finished in a six-place tie in the Greater Victoria League.

CHARLIE HELPS TYEES SNAP TIE

Charlie Davis scored twice Wednesday to lead Vic High Tyees to a 4-2 win over Belmont Braves and out of a second-place tie with Spectrum in the Greater Victoria High School Soccer League.

John Spadafora and Ron McGovern got the other Vic High goals while Dave English and Dan Morneau scored for Belmont. It was 2-2 at half time.

The win put the Tyees within two points of league-leading Reynolds. Roadrunners and both schools have three matches left to play. Vic High and Reynolds clash in one of the last league games on Nov. 1.

THE SOCCER SCENE

By Max Low

When you pick up a Vancouver Island Soccer League program, it kind of hits you.

Between the words Vancouver Island and Soccer League there's a sketch of a man measuring three inches and another player measuring only one and-a-half inches. And the three-inch man has the ball.

Pure coincidence? Of course it is. And yet, those drawings strangely present a picture of the way things are in the league's premier division.

You see, there are the "three-inch" men in London Boxing Club and University of Victoria Vikings and perhaps Nanaimo City but after that the scale drops pretty quickly to the "inch and a-half men."

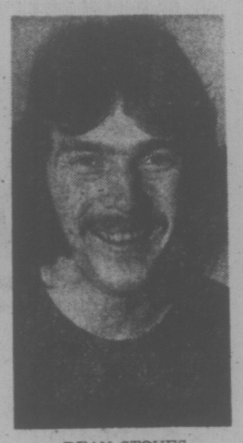
What's all this about inches and scales? Good question. Well, it's not a matter of size at all, of course, but one of experience. And much of the experience that is creating a dividing line in the league was gained by Island players in battle with Mainland clubs.

Now that the B.C. Soccer League is a "no-no" as far as Island clubs are concerned, the players who would have been involved over the water are now in the Island League. That's good. Or is it? Many players and officials aren't too sure.

When Boxing Club battled to a 3-3 draw with Vikings the other night, the lineup of 11 included 10 players with B.C. League experience. And the Boxers didn't even have their two top stars — Brian Robinson and Bob Bolitho — both of whom are in Europe touring with the Canadian national team.

And the Vikings had four or five who have played in the B.C. League plus the know-how of coach Brian Hughes, which is indeed a big "plus."

The Boxers have scored 21 goals in six games and have had only five goals scored against them while the Vikings have played one more game and have scored 22 times and have had six goals scored against them.



DEAN STOKES
. . . 'emotional letdown'

Nanaimo, boasting such ex-Coast League and B.C. League stars as Ray Telford, Tom Forrester, Ike MacKay and Gord Manzini, is in third spot, having scored 21 goals and had eight scored against.

But what of the others? What of those struggling to be "two-inch men"? The Island League strongmen last year, Cosmopolitan Royals and Oak Bay, are mostly in the middle order and fining things tough.

And Gorge Molsons, Victoria's other team in the B.C. League last season, has disintegrated and spread its players around the other clubs. Gorge is left mostly with the players it had last year in the Island League. And in this field, it hasn't a hope.

And what of the real inch and-a-half men? What of Prospect Lake — one win and 28 goals scored against in six matches — and Duncan Powel's Men's Wear — no wins and 30 goals scored against in six outings? Do they really enjoy this soccer at a higher level? It's doubtful.

Boxing Club winger Dean Stokes paused before going into the shower after the game against UVic and said he felt that players with clubs like Prospect Lake and Duncan were "frustrated" when they played the better clubs because "they aren't able to do anything with the ball."

And, confronted with the question: Do you consider it a drop down to a lower level of soccer? Stokes was quick to answer: "Oh yes, very much so."

"It's nice not to have to travel on weekends," Stokes offered with a grin, ". . . but the calibre of play is not the same and I think the calibre will never be the same."

"The players are very disappointed that they succeeded in putting us down in this league and we hope now that we will be able to play in the Mainland League next year," Stokes said.

He said the Boxing Club players are sticking together and playing on the Island not for the sake of the league but because of pride and a desire to prove that "we still have the top team on the Island."

He didn't want to mention any names, but Stokes said that a referee told him that even the referees feel let down now that they don't get any of the glamor teams from the Mainland to handle and are "stuck" with only the same old teams to referee each week.

"That's what it is for us players, too," Stokes ventured, "a letdown an emotional letdown."

City Elderly Reflect On Funeral Services

By ELEANOR BOYLE
Times Staff

In the hall of the Silver Threads centre this week a 79-year-old cornered the reporter.

"Hey, do you want to hear a joke?" he asked. "There was this man at a graveyard putting plates of ham, tomatoes and eggs beside his father's grave, you see. And someone at the next grave, holding roses, said to him: 'Why are you doing that? The dead man can't eat that food.' The person replied: 'The dead can't smell those flowers, either.' ".

He chuckled down the hall and disappeared.

"This thing of sending flowers to a funeral, and putting flowers in front of a grave . . ." he had said earlier, shaking his head.

Death is a subject avoided by the elderly, but almost all have thought about it and decided on some kind of funeral arrangements.

"I wouldn't be as old as I am if I'd been thinking about dying all these years," said a 95-year-old at the activity centre. But he had, indeed, considered it.

"What the heck would I need with an elaborate funeral?" he said.

"I want something simple but dignified," said a woman, 77. "If you've lived that way you should die that way.

"My husband was cremated, but I don't like to think about cremation. That's a horrible thought, to finish with them and throw them in the fire," she said.

"He didn't want anyone to cry where he was," she said, so he had his ashes thrown into the sea.

"With so many people on the earth, if we all start taking up two by six. . ." she said, her voice trailing. "I'd like them to put Daddy in the earth and me right above him so we don't take up so much room — but they won't do that."

"My religion says '. . . ashes to ashes,' " he said, "so burial doesn't seem right.

One employee at the centre said, "I saw one funeral that cost over $500 for a 15 minute service."

Those who made the arrangements had specifically asked for the cheapest service there was, too, she said.

"I'd rather my family could eat for a few months" on the money they would spend on expensive services, said one, "but families feel obligated."

Some family members feel it's the least they can do for someone after a death, she said, "but if they'd done good for her while she was alive . . ."

GRAVESIDE flowers, for living or dead?

A Victoria private hospital matron who has worked with the elderly for over a decade, said "the family often wants the expensive funeral to make up for the care they didn't give."

"There is a certain guilt complex on the part of the family when they put them in an institution," she said.

Prestige, too, is a factor.

According to Rev. Norman Archer of Emmanuel Baptist Church, most elderly persons say they want a short funeral with a few trappings but many change their minds at the last minute, grabbing at straws of material life, and add, "not too short!"

Families involved often do request large ceremonies, "and a lot of it is guilt," said Archer who had many years' experience working with relatives of the newly-deceased.

When people are in a state of shock or grief they don't want to haggle about prices, said Rev. Hori Pratt of St. Paul's United Church.

When in grief they can begin to believe a large funeral is their duty, he said.

However, "a change is taking place and the change is in the right direction," said Pratt.

The move now is toward "dignity, brevity and economy," he said.

"From a Christian point of view, we should spend the money on the living and not on a casket. And we believe in life everlasting," he said.

Services for the dead serve a community purpose though, Rev. Herman Bickle of the Redeemer Luthern Church said, but present-day funerals have lost some of the traditional significance.

"Where I grew up, in the country, funerals were a big event where people got together and shared in something that was going to happen to all of them.

"People are so separated from their roots here," said Bickle, "that funerals are often just costly affairs with little real meaning."

Children's Scribblings Art Works

Parents and teachers should check themselves before firing the "scribblings" of pre-school aged children into the garbage, according to a U.S. nursery school expert.

Norma Kellogg, internationally known for her work with youngsters at San Francisco's Golden Gate Kindergarten Association strenuously objects to the practice of coaching children to copy preferred art procedures.

"Very few adult artists have been able to recapture the sense of proportion that comes biologically in childhood," she told a group of student teachers at University of Victoria.

"Our mistake in children's art is the failure to recognize their innate biological ability and parents and teachers are two ready to throw it in the wastepaper basket and say 'poor kid'.

Mrs. Kellogg who has collected more than 2,000 examples of pre-school aged children's art from around the world, said the human figure drawn by a child "has given many an adult a headache.

"But the child is simply trying to transform the ugliness around him into a work of art. The mind of the child is not reflected in the drawing."

Calling in pyschologists to make a diagnosis on the basis of "weird" children's drawings should be made a crime, she said.

"Their diagnosis is hurled at children when they are simply artistically gifted. It ought to be a crime but it isn't yet."

Children have a capacity for art that is "innate" in childhood and all adult art has its roots in child art.

"Much art that we see today was greatly affected by reaction of parents to child art.

The 12-page booklet "Spirits of Hospitality" ("Les charmes secrets de l'hospitalite") is a useful guide for any host or hostess. It tells you, for instance, that there are no set rules on how to stock your home bar, but that a bottle of whisky, gin and rum are the basics. For those who prefer a lighter drink, it is advisable to have an aperitif wine on hand.

The booklet recommends that you prepare plenty of ice cubes and suggests five pounds for every 15 guests. Another rule of thumb is to have three quarts of mix for every quart of liquor.

Of course, a host should also know how to mix the most popular drinks. In addition, he may want to concoct a specialty of his own.

If you are expecting a large group of people and don't want to overspend, serve one of the innumerable punches.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Friday, Oct. 25

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You get behind the scenes and obtain "inside story." Key is to know what to do with material. Be flexible. Expand activities. You are on brink of valuable discovery. Know it; proceed with confidence. Leo, Aquarius are involved.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Emphasis is on friends, hopes, wishes. You find out how to reach goal. But there is a difference between knowing and doing something about it. There are obstacles. Put shoulder to wheel in sense that you exhibit determination. This will attract ally and then make significant move.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): One you respect pays you compliment of asking for an opinion. Don't be overly shy. Express yourself in meaningful way. Be direct. State reasons—display sense of logic. There is room for you at top—if you push for it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good lunar aspect coincides now with travel, education, special efforts which enlarge your personal horizons. Family and ability to communicate —these command attention. Check calls, correspondence. Taurus, Libra individuals could figure in important ways.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Money, investment prospects, tax shelters—these all are likely to come into focus. Someone may be trying to pull wool over your eyes. Know it and see situations, persons for what they are, not in idealized light.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You finalize deal. You get the basics, including legal rights and restrictions. Partner, mate is close up in picture. Let others reveal their plans. Play your own cards in discreet manner. Time is on your side. Act accordingly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Health, employment figure prominently. You may find that one who was an ally now becomes somewhat of a burden. This is not intentional. Don't cast first stone. But neither should you get inextricably involved in domestic dispute.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent is on emotional response, affair of heart. You find where you stand with "special" member of opposite sex. New project is due to have favorable outcome. Know it and be confident. Personal magnetism aids in ability to put across major point.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Deal with the practical. For now, leave abstract to others. See in light of actuality, not in perspective of the speculative. Go after factual information, not fantasies. Appraisal on property value may be in picture.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent is on short trip, special message and increased social activity. Some resolutions, especially where diet is concerned, could fall by wayside. Key is to strive to make sense out of confusion. Otherwise you will waste a perfectly good opportunity for advancement.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emphasize your determination to find truth regarding costs, payments, credits and debits. Some, with ability to laugh when pressure is applied, may be laughing up their sleeves. Know it and protect your personal possessions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Lunar cycle is such that you meet fascinating people and initiate daring projects. Be independent. Be confident. Be aware of sensuous part of your nature. That means also to be creative—to imprint your own style. You will understand!

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are introspective, somewhat of a perfectionist, often complain about your feet, are fascinated with the ballet, found this past June to be very important. You draw to you Pisces, Virgo individuals. In 1975, you may be free as a bird and flying just as high. Message will become clear as events unfold!

NELLIE MAYNARD doesn't know whether her friends will give her a birthday party although "there's a lot of secrecy going on," she said. Nellie, who lives at 209—50 Douglas St., celebrates her 100th birthday Friday, said she "doesn't feel any different" from when she turned 99.

Protein in Leaves Food of Future?

elizabeth forbes

World food shortages with the accompanying threat of world starvation, coupled with a need to find ways and means of overcoming these frightening problems, is rapidly leading us toward an entirely new concept of nutrition. (What we are eating now and what we might be eating before long.)

Already experiments are being made to find ways of using the bottom of the oceans for future food needs. Animals are being fed some sort of pap made from recycled paper and cardboard, on a trail basis.

Some other experiments in producing foods make us gag. They sound so far-fetched we simply refuse to accept them.

At the same time, if we are thinking at all, we know that these experiments — every one of them — are necessary if we are to find a way of feeding the multitudes (and that includes ourselves) before world famine becomes impossible to stop.

For instance, have you ever thought seriously of getting your protein from leaves and grass?

Well, you could be doing just that if the first large-scale leaf protein trials, taking place in South India, are a success.

I read, in an article sent to me recenlty, that a charitable welfare organization named Find Your Feet, based in the British Isles, is sponsoring the experiment, amongst 300 two to 5½-year-old children at a place called Coimbatore.

These trials are based, the article tells me, on a process developed in the United Kingdom more than 20 years ago, to extract protein from leaves and grasses.

It also says that the juice from these leaves and grasses yield 10 times more protein per acre than beef cattle; four times as much as from vegetables like beans and even 30 per cent more than from soya beans.

Initial phase of the experiment, a two-year comparative feeding trial, is being operated by the local Sri Avinashilingam home science college in Coimbatore.

The principal, Rajammal P. Davadas, has long, general experience in dealing with infant diets and on occasion he has enriched not only children's meals but the campus menu itself, with leaf protein curry.

Carol Martin, chairman of Find Your Feet, back in England, points out that in the affluent countries the very abundance of protein-enriched foodstuffs — until now at relatively low cost — has fostered the belief that talk of worldwide protein malnutrition is no more than "doomwatch dialectics." She then says if one accepts that nutritional self-sufficiency is imperative, especially in low-income countries today, if their populations are to live other than on a knife edge, two tecniques recommend themselves:

First, intensive educational campaigns in rural communities aimed at securing the best use and preparation of raw materials such as potein rich legumes, cereals and oilseeds.

Secondly, the introduction of new method for making additional protein which must be no more complicated than baking bread or making cheese and at the same time be suitable for operation at village level.

The final product must also be the kind that can be incorporated as a supplement in the customary dishes of the region.

Then she concludes "a fair trail for leaf protein is now a matter of urgency."

Well— what do you think? Would you like to eat leaf protein as a side dish with your meat and potatoes? (Or would there be any meat and potatoes?)

Can you imagine stripping, let us say, an apple tree of its leaves as well as its fruit, and placing those leaves in some sort of solution that will mush them down and give you a good percentage of liquid?

Do you see yourself gathering the grass clippings and dumping them (perhaps with the leaves) into a blender. Then drinking the resulting "mush" much as you do a chocolate malt right now?

You don't like the idea? Neither do I! But don't shrug it off and snort that it is an impossibility or that it couldn't happen to us.

If world population continues to grow at the rate it is now and world food reserves get much lower those leaves and grasses might just be what you need to prevent protein malnutrition. U-g-g-gh!

Common Fears Catalogue

Psychiatrists assure us that fear is normal, that the human animal is beset by one anxiety after another from birth to old age. The following is a catalogue of common fears:

A very small child fears that the stopper will come out of his belly button while he sleeps and that he'll deflate like a beach ball, or that he will fall through the toilet seat and drown.

A 12-year-old boy is afraid that his teacher will ask him to name the capital of North Dakota.

A girl of 12 is afraid that her classmates will be able to tell that she is wearing a bra. At fourteen, she fears her classmates WON'T be able to tell that she is wearing a bra.

A boy of 15 is afraid that he will fail his algebra test. At 19, he fears he'll fail his Wasserman test.

Although people in their twenties are relatively free from anxiety, irrational fears return by age 30.

A 30-year-old man is afraid that the government will audit his 1970 income tax return, and that someone will erect a motorcycle scrambles track in the vacant lot next door.

At 45, he fears that he is the only man in the world who doesn't taper, and that the pain in his arm will turn out not to be tennis elbow, but arthritis.

Women are not free from anxiety during adulthood. A 35-year-old woman is afraid that her son is growing a moustache; a 45-year-old is afraid that SHE is growing one.

Accident Prone

DEAR ABBY: Roy and I are engaged to be married. My problem is that he has gotten the same girl pregnant three times.

The first time it happened Roy didn't know me. The girl was in high school then, and she lost the baby, so Roy got off lucky.

The second time Roy was home from the Army on an emergency furlough. (His father had died and he came home for the funeral. Roy said he went to see this girl and she wanted to take his mind off his sorrow.) She had the baby, which Roy still supports.

Right after Roy gave me a ring, this girl turns up pregnant again. She claims it's Roy's. I think she was just trying to hook him. He tried to talk her into an abortion but she refused. She says abortion is murder, it's against her conscience, and besides it's a sin.

She is having the baby in November and I had planned to get married in December.

Roy says if I will forgive him and marry him anyway, he will never look at another girl as long as he lives. Would you marry him? — In Love.

DEAR IN: No. He's accident prone, doesn't learn from experience, and seems to have a serious weaknes he hasn't learned how to control.

DEAR ABBY: You referred to alimony as "the high cost of leaving."

That may be true, but I still think paying alimony is like buying oats for a dead horse. — Still Buying.

DEAR STILL: Ex-wives are not dead horses. They are two-legged oat-burners and very much alive and kicking.

Though the cost of LEAVING may have seemed high at the time, the cost of LIVING has been climbing steadily, so before a man decides to leave his wife, he'd be wise to check the cost of oats, which these days ain't hay.

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter from that husband who complained because his wife of 35 years was a "backseat driver."

He said she made him so nervous he didn't think he could tolerate a motor trip with her beside him as a co-pilot.

That lady reminded me of myself. For the duration of my marriage (52 years) I, too, was a backseat driver. I know it irked my good husband, but he seemed to understand.

One day he drove to a nearby shopping area and I wasn't in the car beside him to say: "Look out for that crazy woman coming toward us on the wrong side of the road!"

This is the end of my story. She killed him. — Mrs. J.M.P.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell me if you think I misrepresented myself. I was divorced many years ago. I never remarried. My husband remarried, but his wife died.

Well, a few weeks ago, my ex-husband died, and I referred to myself as a "widow." I was severely criticized for this.

I feel that since we are now separated by the grave and not the divorce court, I am a widow. I was told in no uncertain terms that I am a DIVORCEE and not a widow.

I'll leave it to you.—Recently Widowed

DEAR WIDOWED: Sorry, but regardless of how you "feel," you are not a widow. Technically, a widow is a woman who has lost her husband by death. A man can have any number of ex-wifes — but only one widow. If he dies unmarried, he leaves no widow.

No fuss, no muss baby-feeding

Introducing baby to solid food can be a trying, messy business. Often baby doesn't want it — and lets you know loudly and clearly. An easy, pleasant and agreeable way is to add a piece of a Farley's Baby Feeding Biscuit to baby's bottle at the time of day you have picked for baby's main mealtime. The piece of Farley's will dissolve instantly, thus may be fed through the bottle's nipple without fuss or muss. Baby will love it — baby's appreciation will be that obvious! As baby gets a little older, add a little more Farley's. Farley's Baby Feeding Biscuits are good for growing babies, for Farley's have added Riboflavin, Niacin, Iron and Calcium. Ask for Farley's Baby Feeding Biscuits at your favourite food store.

Cancer-Causing Materials Still Not Under Control

By JANE BRODY

NEW YORK (NYT) — Cancer invariably arouses fear and anger when it strikes, but society has done very little to control the thousand or more substances in the environment that are thought to cause from 60 to 90 per cent of the nearly 770,000 cases of cancer in North America each year.

As scientists uncover incriminating evidence about more and more chemical and physical substances to which huge segments of the population are exposed, and with hundreds of new substances introduced untested into the environment every year, it is becoming increasingly clear that something must be done. If it is not, there could easily be "epidemics" of cancer in the future.

The ban recently on the production of aldrin and dieldrin, two widely used farm pesticides, suggest that the U.S. government may take a stronger approach to the problem in the future. Principles of action have been set that could become the format for dealing aggressively with other environmental carcinogens (cancer-causing agents).

There already is an epidemic of lung cancer because society failed to recognize the insidious hazards of cigarettes some 50 years ago. Unlike cigarette smoking, however, exposure to other known and suspected carcinogens in the environment is involuntary and unknowing, constituting what some scientists regard as a gargantuan experiment on uninformed human guinea pigs.

In recent weeks, in addition to aldrin and dieldrin, several potential hazards have received public attention, notably asbestos, arsenic and vinyl chloride.

Low-level exposure to asbestos, a common contaminant of air, food and water, has been linked to the development some 30 years later of a rare cancer, mesothelioma, in the children of former asbestos workers. Arsenic, recently shown to cause cancer of the lung and lymph system in exposed workers, had previously been found in many public water supplies in amounts exceeding federally set limits. The limits now may be revised downward.

Recently, the U.S. Department of Labor announced final rules designed to reduce worker exposure to vinyl chloride, a chemical widely used as a basic material in the manufacture of plastics. The chemical has been shown to induce incurable cancers of the liver in some workers exposed to it over substantial periods of time.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's action on aldrin and dieldrin is generally regarded as a significant precedent in dealing with cancer-causing agents. It argues that a ban on carcinogens need not await the demonstration of cancer in people exposed to the pesticides.

The problem that remains, however, is how to test existing and new environmental agents to obtain a realistic estimate of their cancer-causing potential in man.

Since for reasons of ethics and time such tests cannot be performed in man, other less exact methods must be used. Even tests on laboratory animals are impractical for screening the estimated 10,000 or more agents that should be subjected to such tests. Testing of each substance would take approximately three years and cost about $70,000 each.

Therefore, scientists are turning to faster and less expensive "early warning systems." One is the laboratory cell culture, which a chemical carcinogen can "transform" to cancer-like cells in approximately two weeks. When the transformed cells are injected into animals, they can produce malignant tumors in 18 weeks.

Another system, developed by Dr. Joseph Dipaolo of the National Cancer Institute, involves infecting the substance into pregnant animals and analyzing the fetuses for transformed cells.

There is no general agreement among scientists on the best way to test for carcinogenesis. In some cases, a laboratory demonstration of cancer-causing properties may have no relevance for man; in others, negative test findings may give false assurance of safety.

Beyond testing, there remains the problem of what to do about a known or suspected environmental carcinogen. The cancer-causing effects of asbestos were established two decades ago, but this year a U.S. Court of Appeals said it was all right for some 100,000 residents of Minnesota to drink asbestos-containing water because it could not yet be shown that any of them had gotten sick as a result.

As a pragmatic approach, Marvin A. Schneiderman of the National Cancer Institute recently suggested the following: ban those materials known to cause cancer in man; hold in abeyance those substances that cause cancer in animals until enough is known about how man's body processes them to show that they are not a human hazard, and use with great care those that cause genetic changes or birth defects in laboratory tests.

U.S. AGENCY SKEPTICAL ABOUT 'FILTHY' TUNA

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Food and Drug Administration says it has no reason to doubt the safety and purity of canned tuna fish.

The FDA issued the statement Wednesday in response to a Consumers' Union report that samples from 13 to 16 manufacturers of canned tuna turned up "a disturbing number of rodent hairs, other animals' hairs, feather fragments, mothscales and insect and maggot parts."

In the meantime, it said, "on the basis of plant inspections and other surveys regularly conducted by the agency, the FDA has no reason to doubt the general safety and sanitary condition of canned tuna."

Film on Hearing

A film dramatizing the problems faced by persons who experience a hearing loss is available free of charge to Vancouver Island schools, service clubs and other groups.

The half-hour movie, entitled Curse Not the Deaf, features Dana Andrews as a college professor who has a hearing loss and has found help to cope with it.

It is available through Beltone Hearing Aid Service, 613 Yates.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

At all levels, there quite often arises the necessity for guesswork. At the upper levels, the occasions for guesswork have been drastically reduced, the reason being that the expert finds guiding clues which are beyond the ken of the non-expert. An example of such clue can be observed in today's deal, which came up in the 1972 National Men's Pairs Championship. Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

Opening lead: Two of ♥.

Upon capturing the opening lead with his queen of hearts, East cashed the heart ace. He then continued with the heart king, giving declarer a "sluff and a ruff." South trumped this trick in his own hand, and discarded a club from dummy.

After some deliberation, declarer decided that the purpose behind East's third heart lead was to try to develop some trump tricks for partner. So declarer concluded that West probably had lots of trumps.

Accordingly, at trick four, South led the jack of spades out of his hand. West played low, as did dummy. When the jack won the trick, a spade was led to dummy's ace. The South hand was then re-entered via the club king, after which the kind of trumps was cashed. A fourth trump lead was taken by West's queen, for the defenders' last trick.

Had West covered the jack of trumps with his queen, the result would have been the same. Dummy's ace would have won the trick as East's nine fell. From here is declarer's only loser would have been a trump trick to West's ten.

Without the inference that declarer made regarding East's third heart lead, declarer would have played the trump suit differently. With nothing to guide him, he would have led a low trump to dummy's ace at trick four, intending to finesse against East's hoped-for queen at trick five.

As can be observed, had declarer adopted this latter line of play, he would have gone down, since he subsequently would have had to lose two trump tricks to West. Of course, if East had been dealt the singleton queen of trumps (instead of the singleton nine), the deal would have had a different ening...

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"Did you notice what time I came in this afternoon?" asked Ann. "I forgot to look."

John smiled. "As a matter of fact I did," he told her. "The minute hand of our clock was right on a minute mark just 17 minutes ahead of the hour hand."

What time would you make it?

(Answer tomorrow)

Yesterday's answer: MEAT was 7452 (CAT 352, even).

Chris Tops Money List

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Chris Evert, who was beaten by Australia's Evonne Goolagong in last week's championship tournament, still finished the 1974 U.S. women's tennis tour as the top money-earner.

Miss Evert, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., won $156,485 competing in 16 tournaments.

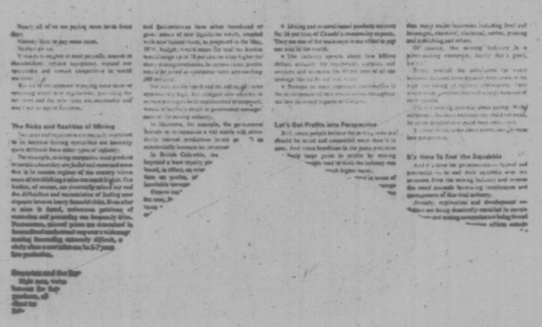
Billie Jean King, of San Mateo, Calif., was second with $119,950 in 12 tournaments. Miss Goolagong was third with $73,480 in nine tournaments, including the $32,000 first prize — largest ever in women's tennis — for the Virginia title.

Rookie of Year

ROCHESTER (AP) — The International League Baseball Writers' Association named Jim Rice of Pawtucket as rookie of the year and Karl Kuehl of Memphis as manager of the year.

Rice led the league in hitting with a .337 average. Kuehl's team finished first in the Southern Division.

DOES ANYBODY OUT THERE GIVE A DAMN IF THE MINING INDUSTRY IS TAXED TO DEATH?



Several weeks ago, this ad on the left focused the nation's attention on the potentially disastrous effects on the Canadian economy — on exports, production and jobs — if the current federal-provincial conflict over mining industry tax revenues isn't quickly resolved. From the response we've received in letters, telephone calls, newspaper, radio and television coverage and commentaries, this editorial best summarizes the problem and why governments must agree to new rules — and soon.

The Toronto Star — TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1974

Double tax crunch on resources

In their rush to grab more tax money from Canada's oil and mining companies, the federal and provincial governments are on a collision course which leaves the companies unfairly caught in the middle.

The latest profit figures for the nation's oil and mining companies might suggest they should be laughing all the way to the bank.

Instead, they find themselves on the chopping block with two axemen, the federal and provincial governments, poised to hack out large chunks of their profits. As matters now stand, in fact, there are instances where a company would have to pay taxes totalling more than 100 per cent of its profit.

The Star is no champion of special privilege for the oil and mining companies. We have argued for years that these companies paid less than their fair share of taxes. We said it was fair and legitimate for taxation and royalties to recover for the people a fair share of the wealth that flows from using up their resources; to prevent companies from pocketing windfall profits from such events as the Middle East oil price increase; to induce the processing of more raw materials in Canada; and to seek a better balance between resources and manufacturing.

These, of course, are the very goals that Canadian governments claimed to be serving in the recent spate of taxation and royalty increases on resource companies. The trouble is that they didn't go about it in a rational co-ordinated way. They didn't stop to figure out whether the total impact of the changes would keep the industry healthy—healthy enough to employ a quarter of a million Canadians directly, to earn Canada many billions of dollars annually in export sales, and to go on exploring for future development.

Some provincial governments raised royalties three- or four-fold. One applied a super-royalty if prices exceeded a certain level. Another laid a super-tax on profits from expanding existing mines. Then Ottawa, in last May's budget, disallowed the higher provincial royalties and taxes as deductions from federal tax.

At this point, the new deal on oil and mining taxation became simply a competitive scramble for revenues. Unless either level of government backs off, or both do, the combined marginal tax-and-royalty rate will approach or even exceed 100 per cent on some new resource developments.

Uncertainty about whether or how the governments will resolve their conflicting claims, plus the bewildering complexity of some of the new laws and regulations, have left the industry not knowing where it stands and unable to plan sensibly for the future.

That's unfair to the companies and harmful to the country. Production, jobs and development plans are likely to vanish—not only in resource companies, but in the businesses that service them—unless the uncertainty is speedily resolved. To some degree this has already happened—oil companies have stopped drilling in southern Alberta.

The best solution would be a full-scale federal-provincial conference to work out fair ground-rules for oil and mining taxation and royalties. Finance Minister John Turner is to discuss Ottawa's oil tax policies with Alberta ministers this week and possibly he will be meeting officials of other provinces as well. If they could agree to work out a set of rules that would tell the players how the game will be played, the whole country will be better off.

Retired Mobster Hired In Patty Hearst Hunt

LOS ANGELES — A retired mobster has been enlisted by Randolph Hearst to help in the search for his daughter, Patty, the Los Angeles Times says.

The Times says the newspaper executive met recently with Mickey Cohen, 61, Los Angeles and discussed an offer to help from the onetime gang-leader while they dined at an exclusive restaurant.

"I guess finding that young lady was the main topic of conversation," Cohen told the Times.

LONDON — A doctor says more men than ever before are dieting because their wives and girl friends nag them about losing weight.

"At one time it was sufficient for men to be entertaining to attract women, while women had to be beautiful," Dr. John McKenzie told a nutrition conference.

"Now women are demanding that their men should be both entertaining and beautiful."

NEW YORK — Margaretta "Happy" Rockefeller, wife of vice president-designate Nelson Rockefeller, leaves the hospital today after just one week of recuperating from radical breast surgery.

Officials at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Institute said Mrs. Rockefeller had been scheduled for release Friday, but was being discharged early because of her "super-strong" constitution.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Bluegrass entertainer Lester Flatt has settled his half million dollar libel suit against Esquire Magazine.

Flatt sued the publication after it reported he was dead. The musician said he was not satisfied with the magazine's later retraction.

The amount of the settlement was not disclosed.

TRENTON, N.J. — Mrs. Paula Grossman, a music teacher who underwent a sex-change operation three years ago, has filed suit in federal court asking for reinstatement to her teaching position.

Mrs. Grossman, 55, of Plainfield, N.J., was a junior high school music teacher in the Bernards township school district for 14 years, but was suspended after undergoing the operation in April, 1971.

The suit, filed Wednesday, asks for reinstatement and back pay, claiming that the school district dismissed her for reasons which had nothing to do with her ability to teach.

"For having this curative surgery, I was dismissed," the suit charged. "It is my contention that as a law-abiding, tax-paying citizen, my livelihood and career have been destroyed through unfair and unlawful discrimination."

SAN JOSE — The Costa Rican government says it has found that financier Robert Vesco did not smuggle guns into the country and therefore it will not deport him.

Public Security Minister Mario Charpentier told a news conference Wednesday the government's investigation revealed that arms apparently destined for Vesco were purchased in California. But he said the guns were still in the United States.

U.S. officials in Washington reported last July that a plane load of arms and prostitutes had been flown to Vesco in Costa Rica.

LONDON Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip will visit the Bahamas next Feb. 20-21 before their state visit to Mexico, Buckingham Palace announced today.

They will go to Nassau as part of their West Indian tour on the way to Mexico, where they visit from Feb. 24-28.

It will be the Queen's first visit to Mexico although Prince Philip has been there three times.

LONDON — Charlie Chaplin announced Wednesday he has changed his mind about retiring and plans to produce a new movie of one of his stories, The Freak.

"I'll never retire," Chaplin, 80, told reporters at a small party marking the publication of My Life in Pictures, a photographic history of his career.

"Perhaps I said I would, but I can't. Things keep popping up in my mind."

MELBOURNE — Three hundred screaming teenagers mobbed American pop singer David Cassidy and British singer Gary Glitter at Melbourne airport today, and Cassidy received minor injuries.

A young girl was knocked to the ground, but got up on her knees in an effort to crawl after Cassidy.

Cassidy and Glitter were arriving in Melbourne for a King of Pop awards ceremony scheduled for Friday night.

MOBSTER TAKEN

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Cotroni, a prominent figure in Montreal's underworld, was extradited from Canada Wednesday and then ordered held on $1.5-million bail on a cocaine-smuggling charge.

Cotroni, 42, lost his year-long fight against extradition in the Supreme Court of Canada and was immediately transferred to U.S. district court in Brooklyn.

A federal grand jury there indicted him and others Oct. 9, 1973, on two counts of conspiring to smuggle more than $1 million worth of cocaine, about 20 pounds, into the United States between December, 1970, and April, 1971.

Judge Jacob Mishler set an Oct. 31 trial date.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas Puccio said Cotroni faces up to 40 years in prison if convicted.

Swiss Find Weary Refugees

MOUTIER (AP) — An exhausted refugee couple, who said they had walked all the way from the Soviet Union, were found hiding in the Moutier city garbage dump, Swiss police said Wednesday.

Police said the two were clad in rags, emaciated, and so terrorized when policemen discovered them they refused to follow until they were given a piece of paper with a handwritten promise they would not be sent home.

Police said the couople claimed they are Hungarians who had fled from forced labor in a Soviet mine, walking at night away from roads and hiding during the day, mainly near dung heaps where they sought scraps of food.

They weighed less than 110 pounds each and said they had their last bowl of hot soup in May when they passed through Hungary. En route they had avoided all contacts and had no idea they were in Switzerland when found.

Authorities did not give their names pending an identity check in the Swiss capital of Bern, where they were taken Wednesday. The man was said to be 54 years old and his wife 62.

In Bern, a justice department spokesman said the pair will be asked if they want to apply for political asylum in Switzerland "and if they do we will examine the case in a benevolent spirit."

LODGE WON'T BE REBUILT

CAMPBELL RIVER — Historic Forbes Lodge property is up for sale.

Owner, Jeff Slade, said Wednesday the lodge, gutted by fire Sept. 3, will not be rebuilt.

JAYCEES MAY DROP QUEENS

Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce is considering ending its sponsorship of the Miss Victoria promotion, directors of the senior chamber were told Wednesday.

Gordon Boyd, delegate to the Victoria chamber directors' meeting, said people generally had grown apathetic toward the annual contest and the Jaycees found "the benefits are questionable."

He said members are contemplating dropping the event, which has sent a number of candidates on to become Miss Canada in the 20 years Victoria Jaycees have conducted the promotion.

The club is looking for another organization to take over the Miss Victoria contest, Boyd said.

Kim Firth — Miss Victoria for 1974 — is in Toronto to take part in the Miss Canada pageant, to be telecast Monday.

Boyd said few people understrand the time and expense involved in planning the local event, lining up contributions and paying for such things as travel and broadcast fees, a $10,000 investment.

"But we don't get a fair return," Boyd said.

He doubted that many people are aware either of who Miss Victoria is or that she is representing the city in Toronto.

At the same time, he said, "the majority of business people are very good and willing to donate time and money" to the event.

Chamber Director Slams Gov't Radio Advertising

B.C. residents should not have to pay for advertising of government programs, Victoria Chamber of Commerce director John Chew said Wednesday.

He told a directors' meeting he did not agree with expensive radio advertisements describing the virtues of such things as the Insurance Corp. of B.C., which he agreed was costing drivers too much.

"To add insult to injury we are paying for them to advertise what they are doing to us," Chew said.

It was "very misleading and wrong" for the goverment to quote only the basic cost of insurance to drivers when talking about equalization of premiums proposed for 1975, neglecting to mention the 10-cents-a-gallon revenue to be derived from gasoline tax as an ICBC premium subsidy.

"Any merchant would be hammered into the ground if he tried that today," Holmes commented, indicating drivers pay much more for their insurance than quoted, according to how much gasoline they buy.

Victoria drivers — who will not enjoy lower insurance premiums simply because they are already paying the lowest insurance cost in B.C. — should not have to subsidize the rest of the province through gasoline taxes without receiving the benefits of lower premiums, Campion said.

Dealing with a suggestion by Transport Minister Robert Strachan that main-route B.C. Ferry fares may have to rise to meet a projected $20 million operating deficit of the system this year, Campion said the committee disagreed.

"The ferry doesn't seem to be a losing run," he said, referring to the Tsawwassen-Swartz Bay service.

"It is almost always full. Why should we be asked to pick up the deficit?"

He also wondered why Victorians should have to pay a toll on the crossing at all, since it is a link of the Trans-Canada Highway.

President Robert McHaffie stressed the discussion was informal and not to be construed as chamber policy.

Chamber Fearful

A regional plan for the capital, as viewed by the public Tuesday, is "in some respects rather frightening," Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Robert McHaffie said Wednesday.

He reported briefly to directors on a public presentation of the Capital Regional District's plan, which he attended, and called for more "input" from the chamber.

McHaffie said he will ask committees on transportation, environment and beautification to consider the plan and its implications as ammunition for chamber recommendations to the regional board.

He praised a city hall plan to develop Government Street as a mall, following previous disagreement and public debate on the issue.

City planners had explained their motives and concepts, he noted, suggesting if that format were maintained there would be less criticism of such proposals.

come in and see the Durst family of enlargers — 4 models to choose from!

Taking a picure — pressing the camera button — is usually a matter of seconds. The creative part of the photographic hobby starts in the darkroom. Here you really bring out the pictorial values of your shots. Here you can follow your personal tastes and preferences in enlarging your own negatives, whether black and white or colour. You can emphasize the impact of the image by making it larger, by cropping it or even by controlling the colour of the tone values. After all, you are the best judge of what your picture should include.

When buying an enlarger check the extreme standards of performance and quality — features which go without saying for Durst. The 2-year guarantee for all amateur equipment further confirms our confidence in Durst quality.

Oil by Rail 'Feasible'

The federal deputy minister of the environment says a feasibility study will soon be released which shows that shipping oil by rail from the Arctic to southern points is at least as feasible as by pipeline.

Robert Shaw said in an interview Wednesday that despite the study, however, he believes the best method is a pipeline and a highway.

He said the study, conducted by Canadian National Railways and CP Rail for the federal government at a cost of $1.5 million, is expected to be released within two weeks.

It examined the technical and economic viability of moving the oil and gas from the Mackenzie Delta and Alaska to Trout River, a community 700 miles north of Edmonton in the Northwest Territories.

At the request of federal Transport Minister Jean Marchand and Premier Dave Barrett, the group is also expected to assess the feasibility of Barrett's proposal to run a rail line through the Yukon and B.C. to bring Arctic and especially Alaskan oil and gas south.

Shaw said that although rail transportation would prove to be feasible, the volume traffic required to ship the oil would be such that it would create environmental problems.

He said an obvious problem would be created by cutting through the caribou migration trails. Caribou probably couldn't get over the tracks safely with a train passing any given point every 20 minutes.

He said, however, that environmental studies already undertaken in the Arctic have shown that the caribou will cross a pipeline.

Shaw said drivers on a highway would be forced to stop for herds in a migration when there are thousands of animals in the herd.

He said a full environmental study is probably necessary.

Shaw said opposition to supertankers is fruitless because they are the only way to move quantities of oil demanded by the Western world's energy needs.

He said what the federal government objects to and what West Coast residents should object to is the movement of supertankers in crowded inland waterways like the Strait of Georgia.

DIPHTHERIA WARNING

Two recent cases of diphtheria discovered in Greater Victoria herald the start of yet another outbreak, Dr. Allan Arneil, regional health officer, warned Wednesday.

There is little which can be done to prevent the ravages of the poison produced by the disease once diphtheria has been diagnosed, he said.

Often, the damage has already been done.

And it's a sad commentary that only about 60 per cent of children entering school are fully immunized, he added, despite the easy availability of immunization through the family doctor or local health department.

Arneil said more than 90 cases and carriers were found in the region last winter and recent cases leave little doubt there will be more this winter.

It is possible for a person who has been immunized to carry the disease and spread it without suffering ill effects. A particular danger lies in his infecting someone who has not been immunized.

Diphtheria, a scourge half a century ago, is an acute infection, generally centred in tonsils, larynx or nose and the toxin it produces can effect the nervous system and damage the heart.

It is considered particularly serious when contracted by infants and young children.

Larsen said the current cases are quarantined and are being treated with drugs.

Young: Enough Beds

There is basically no shortage of hospital beds in the Capital district for treatment of urgent cases but no community will ever have all the beds it could use, the regional hospital board was told Wednesday.

Board chairman Art Young said Victoria's two general hospitals believe renovation and reconstruction programs to modernize their plants are more important than acquiring new beds at this time.

The waiting lists for elective surgery at both Victoria General and Royal Jubilee Hospitals have been shortened because both hospitals are utilizing their facilities more efficiently, he said.

In addition, the region's early hospital discharge program has produced a saving of 4,000 patient-days in local hospitals this year, the equivalent to adding 21 acute care beds.

The program, as Dr. Allan Arneil, regional health officer, explained later, makes available such services as nursing, homemakeing and physiotherapy so some patients can be discharged from hospital earlier than usual and recuperate at home.

And as well as freeing hospital beds, it's a money-saver. It costs about $90 a day to keep a patient in hospital but only $15 a day to provide the assistance in the home.

At the moment there are about 25 patients on the program. It is available only in Saanich, Victoria, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and View Royal but Arneil said there are plans to extend it.

In other business, the regional hospital board learned that the necessary order-in council permitting it to establish its new planning commission is scheduled to go before the provinical cabinet today.

With cabinet approval, the board will be able to pass the enabling bylaw next week, said Young. The commission will have charge of planning and overseeing regional development of hospital facilities.

Asked why there is continuing delay on construction of 75 acute care beds at the new Peninsula Hospital, Young said that project, along with all other hospital construction, will have to be processed by the new commission.

Director Jim Campbell said he knows it will not be a popular view but he believes the beds, intended to replace Resthaven Hospital in Sidney, should be built closer to the population centre on the peninsula, which means right in Sidney.

The board earlier approved adding the beds to the present extended care hospital in Central Saanich. Director Jean Butler disagreed with Campbell, saying the new beds are intended to serve the entire peninsula.

Time to Harvest Last Beans, Cukes

Every home garden plot has a different look about it at this time for the simple reason that every gardener and family has its own set of preferences.

There will be cornstalks with drying leaves rustling spookily in the silence; runner bean vines still twine around their supports; and cucumbers and winter squashes remain on plants.

Cornstalks are valuable material for composting. Before they get any drier, remove the last cobs. Then take an axe to chop the stems into four or five inch pieces before adding them to the heap. The bare cobs after the kernels have been used, can be either split down the centre or into small rounds. All will make fibre in the damp winter compost heap.

Runner beans are still producing edible pods, and those old enough to have real beans inside are to be shelled like peas for cooking along with the sliced green pods of the younger ones.

When the last beans are picked, pull up the plants, chop into lengths and lay on the heap. The smaller you cut these plant parts the more rapidly they break down to soil. But break down they will, regardless, with the action of soil bacteria and enzymes plus moisture.

Cucumbers and immature squash do not take more than a degree or two of frost for an hour or so. Some gardens still have had no sign of frost, notably those near salt water, and on high ground. Even these will eventually get a touch, so watch vegetables which are known to be damaged by frost.

Take them indoors, a few each day, and use them in the many various ways suggested in recipes in this newspaper. Food is priced so high today partly because of its overall scarcity in the world as reported from time to time by the League of Nations.

Why should we waste food just because we have raised it at small cost to ourselves and probably are not hungry enough to realize the full value of what we leave to rot in the garden?

While every kind of plant, its roots and its fruits will eventually make soil when rotted, the primary purpose of growing these things was for food.

Tomatoes are still ripening well on plants protected by double sacking each night against the early morning white frosts which come between seven and eight. Each day, the ripe fruits are picked. Soon the few small green tomatoes will have to be picked and the plants pulled up.

When lifting carrots and beets we see how dry the soil is below. It doesn't matter now for the root crops which are doing no more growing. But late fall and winter vegetables which are still active should have a good watering regardless of little showers.

Winter radish must have damp soil to grow well; lettuce seedlings and transplanted young plants need moisture too. Parsley, chervil and chives will only continue growth if soil is kept damp.

Cabbages, sprouts, spinach and the perennial broccoli for next year — all must be cared for with watering although other parts of the vegetable garden are beginning to take a winter vacation.

SPLIT LEVEL
SPLENDOUR
ONLY $79,500

The price is right for this brand new beauty. No home can exceed the style or common sense design of a four-level split for the modern family. There's space to S-P-R-E-A-D O-U-T and enjoy your family without falling over them. The "zoned" design is pre-planned for additional development. The common sense is carried over to the built-in convenience features and the one piece fibreglas bath tub, shower unit and vanity tops. Quality construction is apparent from exterior red brick veneer to ribbon-grain mahogany kitchen cabinets. Compare this 1500 sq. ft. home on a 95 ft. frontage lot for value with anything else in an equally prestigous location and see what I mean. You want to hear more? Perhaps discuss a trade? MLS. Call:

TOWER STUDIED

VANCOUVER (CP) — A control tower to direct the steadily growing air traffic in and out of Vancouver Harbor is under study by the Ministry of Transport.

Bill Johnson, Pacific region civil aviation controller in the Ministry of Transport, said a detailed system of regulations already applies to air traffic whether it is over land or sea.

Ray Accuser 'Drunk'

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The man who placed James Earl Ray at the scene of the slaying of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was too drunk to stand up 15 minutes before he said he saw Ray, says testimony in a hearing on a motion for withdrawal of Ray's guilty plea.

James McGraw, a taxi driver, told a federal court hearing he was to pick up Charles Quitman Stephens about 5:45 p.m. April 4, 1968, but found Stephens drunk and unable to walk or stand in an upstairs bedroom of a rooming house.

Stephens identified Ray as a man who ran from the upstairs bathroom of the rooming house shortly after King was shot as he stood on the balcony of the nearby Lorraine Motel about 6 p.m. Authorities say the shot was fired from the bathroom.

Ray's lawyers placed McGraw on the stand in an attempt to discredit Stephens' testimony and support their contention that evidence was available to Ray's former lawyers to argue his innocence.

Ray pleaded guilty and accepted a 99-year prison sentence for the slaying of King, but he now is asking that the plea be withdrawn so he can stand trial in the case.

Murder Goes To Hearing

A two-day preliminary hearing for Roland Henry Bird, 35, charged with the murder Sept. 5 of Marlene Marie Margaret Hutcheon, started Wednesday in provincial court.

WOMEN MOUNTIES TO BE WARM

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand assured MPs Wednesday that the new women members of the RCMP will not be patrolling in Canada's bitter winters in short skirts.

He was asked about the matter by David MacDonald (PC—Egmont) who said pictures in newspapers showed the women's long and short-skirted uniforms as working uniforms.

He asked if there was more appropriate dress.

Allmand said the pictures depicted dress uniforms. The working uniforms included slacks, and were warm.

Commons Erupts Over Filthy Meat

Times News Services

OTTAWA—The scandal over filth in meat erupted today in the Commons when opposition MPs attacked Health Minister Marc Lalonde for saying consumers can cook impurities out of the meat.

New Democratic Party spokesman Ed Broadbent charged that Lalonde's advice on cooking hamburger amounts to suggesting that people can "eat excrement providing it's well cooked."

The attack on Lalonde followed an earlier, sharp exchange between the health minister and prices review board chairman Beryle Plumptre who said Wednesday the government has virtually given meat merchants a licence to sell substandard meat

Plumptre told a news conference that inspection services provided by the health department are inadequate, and government and meat sellers are doing less than enough to see that humburger is safe to eat.

She was commenting on a CBC television program Sunday which reported finding fecal contamination and other bacteria in a number of hamburger samples collected in Ontario.

Lalone said Wednesday that Plumptre should become better informed and that germs are no problem if hamburger is well cooked. He recommended cooking the meat at 160 degrees or more to destroy any health hazards.

"That's fine if everyone likes to eat hamburger well done," Plumptre shot back at her news conference.

Broadbent urged the government to insure that retail meat outlets are adequately inspected.

Further, he said, it likely would mean an inspector in every home because consumers may not be handling their ground beef properly.

This brought Broadbent to his feet in a hurry, saying the bacteria are potentially fatal and that the minister is saying it is safe to "eat excrement providing it's well-cooked."

Lalonde replied that the NDP leader was not taking the issue seriously and that he "clearly has been carried away by his own imagination."

"There is no relationship between what he has said and what I said," the minister added.

He asked Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelen whether he could "take on" Lalonde and Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet to insure that beef is handled properly at every stage between the farm and the home.

Whelen replied that "different departments are known for co-operating" to protect the public.

Jim McGrath, Conservative consumer affairs watchdog, said the government should improve its inspection system so that products "unfit for human consumption" are not for sale.

Lalonde said in an interview later that to strive for food products without bacteria would be "horrendously expensive."

"We have to have realistic standards."

Lalonde, who recently suggested that Canadians try powdered milk to avoid the rising costs of whole milk added:

S. Africa Wines Barred

South African wines and liquors will no longer be listed by B.C. liquor stores.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said today B.C. will mark the 30th annniversary of the founding of the United Nations today by banning South African liquor.

The ban is a gesture by B.C. to show its opposition to the "institutionalized racism" practised in South Africa, said Macdonald, and is a signal to the people of South Africa to "reverse these disastrous policies before it is too late."

Macdonal said however, that "individual choice" will remain in B.C. since private citizens will still be able to order cases of South African wines for their own use.

The ban will not mean elimination of South African product immediately, since the liquor stores throughout the province still have 4,991 cases of wine and liquor left.

Dentist Hurls Candy

Jonathan Howland, interim co-ordinator of the islands regional health and human resources council, said the incident started when he and Dr. Orr were standing beside the candy counter having a discussion about tooth decay.

"I said something like, 'well, what do we do about it then, Robert?' and he replied: 'We start right here' and began picking up packages of jelly beans and announcing that the store was a dope pusher.

"He distributed packages of jelly beans in ever-increasing circles. The store was fairly crowded at the time and everyone just stood there stunned."

Ron Watkins, grocery manager of the Delmas Co-Op, said he will lay a charge of causing a disturbance against Dr. Orr when a magistrate calls at the islands.

"I suppose he has a point, but that's no way to go about making it," said Watkins. "We do sell a lot of candy to the Indian kids here but no more than any other store would."

Details of the building will be announced in a few days but Public Works Minister Bill Hartley said the structure will be "six or seven storeys high."

Hartley would not disclose the exact location of the new building but said it will be outside the legislative precinct in keeping with the province's promise to the city to build some accommodation downtown.

Expansion of the B.C. Hydro and Law Courts buildings are the first steps in the plan, said Hartley, and the new downtown building is the next project.

The minister declined to give any specific outline of the government's over-all expansion plans but he said he is thinking in terms of several buildings of six or seven storeys each.

"It's difficult to imagine one million square feet," he said; "but I always use an example like the Belmont Building.

"It would take 20 Belmont buildings to get one million square feet," she said.

Hartley said he could not accurately predict the cost of the entire project but it could run higher than $50 million.

While the government hopes to decentralize its buildings to help the downtown core and to relieve congestion in the James Bay area, some buildings will definitely be built within the legislative precinct.

Establishment of large parking lots on the northern perimeter of the city to accommodate a park-and-ride scheme for public servants is designed to eliminate the need for some parking lots around the legislature and those lots may be used for future building development.

One parking area, across the street from the motor-vehicle branch on Menzies, is being given prime consideration, said Hartley, but no building has been designed for it yet.

The purpose of office expansion program is to make the government "the master in its home" and to save money, said Hartley.

This year the government will spend more than $5 million on rents and leases in Victoria alone and about $8 million around the province.

Hartley admits the cost of rental accommodation has doubled since last year but he says inflation has hit, the civil service has grown and the government is finally "getting people out of cupboards and closets and vaults and hallways and putting them into worthwhile working space."

UIC to Ask For 'Proof'

MONTREAL (CP) — Between 50 and 60 per cent of persons who receive Unemployment Insurance Commission (UIC) benefits will soon need to show proof that there are no job opportunities for them, Supplies and Services Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer said Wednesday.

Mr. Goyer told a meeting of his riding association that legislation is to be introduced strengthening and co-ordinating the operations of the UIC and Canada Manpower centres.

He said the changes will affect recipients in at least four categories but did not elaborate what he meant by "proof."

Whenever there is a shortage in a particular field of work, all UIC recipients who qualify for that work would be called in to report "physically" to the nearest UIC office.

Maternity benefits are to be increased to 15 weeks, up from nine, but women receiving the benefits will be called to the UIC office at the end of that period to determine whether they are looking for a job.

UIC recipients who move from one province to another would have to report to a UIC office in the new province as soon as they settle down.

He also said workers who quit their jobs and request benefits would be called in to explain their case and prove they have not been able to get another job.

MIGRANT HOOKERS IN LOADS?

OTTAWA (CP) — Truckloads of prostitutes may be crossing the United States border to ply their trade in Vancouver's Gastown district, George Whittaker (PC—Okanagan-Boundary) said today.

He told the Commons that three law students, working part-time for the Vancouver police department, made the allegation Wednesday on an open-line radio program.

"I have no personal knowledge of this," replied Revenue Minister Ron Basford, whose Vancouver Centre riding encompasses Gastown, a renovated skid road area.

But he promised; amid laughter from both sides of the House, to discuss the matter with Immigration Minister Robert Andras to see "if one or both of us should go to Vancouver to investigate."

Mr. Whittaker, 54 and the father of five, said later his information is sketchy.

"I've never gone down and tested the market. This isn't something I know a lot about, you know."

But the allegations should be checked thoroughly.

"This kind of stuff should not be allowed. The government should step in and put a stop to it."

Bremer Suing Barrett, Dailly

In a British Columbia Supreme Court writ filed Wednesday, Bremer alleges that Premier Barrett libelled and slandered him on CBC television on or about Jan. 11.

NEWS BRIEFS

Violin Genius Dies at 65

AMSTERDAM (UPI) — David Oistrakh, one of the world's greatest violinists, died today in an Amsterdam hotel at the age of 65.

A spokesman for the Amsterdam Philharmonic Orchestra said the Soviet violinist, son of a poor Jewish bookkeeper, died shortly before 4 a.m.

Pollution Again

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — For the second time in a week, the department of ecology has issued a statewide air pollution warning, calling for a shutdown of open burning. The department issued a forecast warning, the lowest of four warning levels based on a national weather service forecast of stable air conditions, little air movements, poor ventilation and stagnant air.

Thieu Sacks Four

School Bombed

LONDON (Reuter) — Harrow school, one of Britain's most famous public schools, was the target for a bomb attack Wednesday night, only 24 hours after a blast at an exclusive London club. Police said a bomb weighing between three and five pounds was placed in a window sill of a house occupied by three teachers and their wives. Nobody was hurt.

NIXON IN HOSPITAL, SURGERY CONSIDERED

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Former president Richard Nixon was readmitted to Memorial Hospital Wednesday night for further treatment of his left leg. Nixon's doctor said if the treatment proves ineffective, surgery may be required.

Dr. John Lungren, Nixon's personal physician, said the decision to readmit Nixon to the hospital for further diagnostic tests was made after oral medication proved ineffective for treatment of the problem.

Lungren said tests earlier in the evening revealed blockages of blood vessels resulting in a "near total occlusion or blockage of blood flow" in Nixon's left thigh.

Sugar Profit Up 1,200%

NEW YORK (AP) — Great Western United Corp. says soaring sugar prices resulted in a 1,200 per cent increase in the corporation's after-tax profits during the third quarter of this year.

Net income for the three-month period ended Sept. 30 increased to $20.96 million, or $9.23 a share. That compares with $1.6 million, or three cents a share, earned in the same period in 1973. Board chairman Robert Everett credited the sharp increase in earnings to the continuing high level of sugar prices.

Having Trouble With Computers?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Have you ever tried to deal with a computer that persists in sending you bills you have already paid and for which you have sent numerous letters explaining your predicament?

"It should help relieve a major frustration of consumers," says Dave Hinks, of the Consumers' Association of Canada, which joined with the Canadian Information Processing Society to introduce the service.

It is believed the first of its type in Canada and possibly in North America.

The ombudsman office will be staffed by a group of computer experts to handle the complaints lodged by persons finding themselves incapable of further dealings with an unsympathetic computer.

The ombudsman, drawn from the committee of experts on a rotating basis, will work in three areas: handling individual problems, handling class problems where a group of persons have been subjected to the same computer error, and watching for the formation of "computer monsters." Such monsters could include organizations storing massive confidential, personal information.

As there is no legislation backing the service, the ombudsman will have to rely on the good will of the companies or agencies complaints are lodged against.

Dr. Ted Sterling, director of the computing science department at Burnaby's Simon Fraser University, says the group will basically be using persuasion to achieve its aims.

And if a company tells the ombudsman to drop dead?

"The other thing we have is publicity," says Sterling. "But we will not use that weapon lightly."

Owners Smell Bureaucratic Rat

Apartment owners in B.C. fear the government is planning "another multi-million dollar bureaucracy" in addition to the Rentalsman's office, to deal with rent controls.

Richard Dolman, executive-director of the Rental Housing Council of B.C., said Wednesday his group believes the government plans to set up an "allowablesman" to take over some of the functions now handled by Barrie Clark in the rentalsman's office.

"It's just another excuse for further delay and further bureaucracy," said Dolman.

The council believes the government will introduce changes in the Landlord and Tenant Act to set up the new bureaucracy for the sole purpose of recommending new rent ceilings and dealing with complaints about rent increases from tenants.

"The allowablesman will probably acquire a staff of economists and a big bureaucracy and play around with rent increases for another three months," said Dolman.

The charge comes in the wake of an announcement by Clark that he has recommended Attorney-General Alex Macdonald set up a separate commission to decide how large a rent hike landlords should be permitted.

Under the new landlord and tenant legislation, Clark has the power to recommend an allowable rent increase level to replace the interim eight per cent limit on rent increases.

But Clark admitted at a press conference Wednesday he has "ducked the question" by making recommendations to the government without actually sugigesting a new figure.

The rentalsman said he believes an independent commission should make the decision on rent increases so he can maintain his new position as impartial judge and mediator in landlord-tenant disputes.

Macdonald had originally promised the new ceiling would be announced by Oct. 1. Then he said by the end of the month and now he says the ceiling will likely not be announced until the legislative session, when changes in the tenant legislation are expected.

The ceiling will come into effect Jan. 1, 1975.

Debate over the issue continues to rage as the apartment owners threaten to strike if Macdonald does not announce the ceiling by the end of the week.

The council, which is demanding either a rent increase ceiling in the range of 20 per cent or no ceiling at all, will meet tonight to discuss further action.

If Macdonald does not have a concrete statement to make after today's cabinet meeting, Dolman says the group will likely decide to strike but will make the official announcement Friday morning.

By striking, the landlords mean they will not rent new apartments which become vacant. About 1,600 landlords belong to the council, a majority of apartment owners in the province.

Meanwhile, Bruce Yorke, president of the B.C. Tenants Organization, rallied with a handful of tenants on the lawns of the Legislative Buildings Wednesday, demanding the eight per cent rent freeze stay in effect.

The tenants placed a large sign on the lawn, reading "Keep Rents Down" and handed Macdonald a 15,000-name petition demanding retention of the rent freeze.

'Have a Say'

They Believe in Getting People Involved At James Bay's Feisty Community School

By PETE MEDWID
Times Staff

The James Bay Community School is more than a building with lights burning at night.

To Brian Wile, assistant to the principal—curriculum, it's a viable alternative to what we are doing in our schools today:

"I believe in the point that it's your kid I'm teaching and you should have a say.

"As well, I'm a professional and I have an expertise you don't have and I should have some say . . . let's get together."

To Janey Allan, assistant to the principal — community school, it's getting the adult and child into the school and the school into the community:

"We'll help identify the needs and wants of the community; then, on a low-key level we'll assist in the development of that need; it's getting people involved in what they want to do."

To principal David Allan (no relation to Janey), it's the bringing together of a strong staff and using that staff in and out of the classroom:

"We must work closely with the community. We've had a case involving one family where 24 different people were giving them advice — one the welfare worker; another the probation worker, and so on; it's the professionals getting their act together and working as one."

This, basically, is what is happening at James Bay Elementary — Victoria's first effort at developing a community school; one that's fully integrated and involved with every aspect of community life whether its health, welfare, recreational or educational.

The idea started three years ago when David Allan and others in James Bay explored the idea of a school responsive to the needs of a community.

It took on new dimensions a year later when Wile joined the team . . . a person disenchanted with his role as a vice-principal in a "traditional" school. He now devotes up to 50 per cent of his day developing a curriculum meaningful to James Bay students.

And now Janey Allen is on the scene. She came at the beginning of this term after obtaining her master's degree in community education.

"Fourteen or so years ago it was easy to teach. It was all in a big book and a teacher knew from day to day what he was going to be doing.

"Now there is resource material coming off the printing presses every month. Teachers have more freedom today but they need someone in my field to help them prepare the curriculum."

An illustration was last year when Wile and teachers took 30 or 40 hours to develop a new language arts program for James Bay. The old program was not meeting the needs of the students from James Bay. Because time was made available to him, Wile was able to come up with a program liked by both pupils and the teachers.

Wile sees the community school idea spreading but only if the school and the community "grow into it."

Wile says the school has received total support from the school board although there is the odd administrative and elected official who disagrees with the James Bay project.

"They're the conservative element and what frightens them is the giving away, on the surface at least, the powers that Dave Allan has given me.

"That makes them nervous. They ask 'what the hell are you guys doing down there'?"

The support is there . . . financially and otherwise but the day of reckoning is coming."

Wile says the school is in a preferred financial and staffing situation in the city.

"There are others doing the same kinds of things we are but without the community school banner or the extra $60,000 we've received from the board.

"Somebody is going to say let's take a look at what you are doing with that $60,000."

As well as teachers and an extra vice-principal, James Bay has one full-time and one half-time learning assistance teachers; two full-time teacher aides with a third to be hired; two community school workers who will be looking after the evening and weekend programs; a child care worker hired through a $500 a month human resources branch grant; and a full time library-media director.

Janey Allan has had a tremendous response to her part of the program. A community school council with representation from teachers, parents and others has been set up.

It's this group which will come up with some of the ideas on what the school should attempt to do within the community.

For the family as a group there is volleyball matches and folk dancing.

Is there a danger of community enthusiasm for the school and its plans falling off?

Says Janey: "If there's no meaningful involvement . . . something like the old PTA type of thing and there is a falling off of interest this then tells us something about our program.

"It will mean we will have to take a look at . . . both professionally and from the community . . . and come up with something the community really wants."

Janey sees the community school operating on a seven-day, 12 month operation. There are plans afoot for before and after-school activities for children, whose parents are working and she sees the time when there will be a full program on weekends.

The school itself uses two types of teaching methods — open space and closed classrooms.

Out of a meeting held in April of 1972 between the school board, Victoria city council and the community, the idea for a community school was planted.

This month, with the last of the students moved from South Park to the enlarged James Bay, the community school concept is in full bloom.

Item: A disturbing, sobering report from Britain today under the by-line of Cecil Porter which tells of the astonishing illiteracy in a nation that most of us consider the most literate on earth.

Apart from those adults unable to read and write the report notes that some 12 per cent of all 15-year-olds suffer the same fate, a sort of twilight zone in communication.

The report puts a good deal of the blame on television and goes on: "One powerful reason is that TV is helping to breed thousands of children who may never be able to read properly. Already many youngsters of 11 are being found to have reading ages less than those of six-year-olds. They are backward because of a bookless home environment dominated entirely by TV, radio and pop records . . . almost all the communication in which the children are involved is oral, gestural and pictorial . . . reading is encountered mainly as a chore during school lessons."

So far as I know there's been no similar study made among young Canadians, but I'm convinced the problem is as great or greater in this country and further complicated by the fact that, unlike Britain, we have two television networks that seem mindless of quality programming and social values.

If we have the rate of illiteracy that's documented in the case of Britain, as I strongly suspect, along with the distortions of reality that we see nightly on our tiny screens, this may just be a national problem that will dwarf inflation, unemployment or any other recognizable roadblock to a bright future.

Item: My wife and daughter home today from an auction sale in Duncan and I watched them, speechless, while they unloaded the parts of the most decrepit, ancient brass bed I have ever seen, it being instantly consigned to a dark corner of the basement.

The giggling and the exchange of congratulations, the general air of euphoria, as they handled this wretched, pitting monstrosity from a bygone era caused me to marvel again at the strange ways of the antique-lover, a condition, that, sooner or later, seems to aflict nine out of 10 females of the world.

We now have a collection of assorted chests, tables, rocking chairs, kerosene lamps, wagon wheels, basins and mugs, brass plates and other bric-a-brac and doo-dads from the past that represents, to my way of thinking, a staggering investment. Their interest in almost anything that was outmoded 30 or 40 years ago can only be described as insatiable. They'll travel a hundred miles, if necessary, to view a dining room suite that has been in a farmhouse through three generations.

The astonishing part of all this — and perhaps the reason why I remain speechless — is the verifiable fact that there's not a single piece of this junk that hasn't doubled or trebled in value in the past two years. Who would believe that an elephant's foot umbrella stand, a thing that no sane man would allow within 10 miles of his home, isn't to be had these days for under $300?

Item: A wonderful, if brief, report in on the CP teletype today about the contest they held in Edmonton to find a new name for the Edmonton Coliseum. Seems the Edmonton Exhibition Association offered $1,000 and a free trip to Spokane's Expo as prizes. There were more than 1,500 entries. The winning name? The Edmonton Coliseum.

Item: To lunch today with Walter Boyd, a visiting San Francisco newsman with whom I've shared several assignments, and he tells me that the prevailing mood of people in his part of the country is intense soul-searching.

There was, says he, a brief period of relief when President Nixon resigned, but the significant aftermath of the Watergate disclosures and the Nixon tapes has been a torment of self-examination to find out if these were the doings of a few rogues in the White House or whether they reflect American life in general.

"Many of the people involved in Watergate have blamed the system, the need for success or power, the driving ambition that's always been a proud part of our politics and private lives," Boyd says. "Now there's a great body of Americans asking themselves if our form of capitalism is venal or whether the blame can be put on a few of Nixon's men. You hear talk about political integrity, about personal honesty. You don't hear about it here, but there's a national inquest going on."

If he's right — and I've never known him to be wrong — Nixon's going may be a great thing for the United States.

Stations Polluters—Pollen

Mayor's Words 'Exceed Thoughts'

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen indulged in some verbal snipping Wednesday, picking off a succession of targets including Victoria's radio stations, which he likened to air polluters, the city's only television station and the Canadian Radio-Television commission.

But Pollen had some of the crossfire returned by CRTC chairman Pierre Juneau when he appeared before the commission's hearing in Vancouver as an intervener in licence renewal applications by four Victoria broadcasting outlets: CHEK-TV and radio stations CKDA, CFMS-FM and C-FAX.

Juneau told the mayor he took "exception" to Pollen's remarks about the commission, and added that in conversations with Pollen that day he had noticed that "your words sometimes exceed your thoughts."

Earlier, Pollen had strongly criticized the CRTC for not sitting in Victoria to hear the Victoria applications. He also launched a general indictment against broadcasting standards in the capital city, excluding the FM station from his charges but including the other Victoria AM station, CJVI.

Pollen asked the commission to renew the licences for two years only, rather than the five-year periods the stations have requested.

"I would like to see this commission command or direct the three AM stations in Victoria to strongly de-emphasize their strident commercialism and direct them to play down their external advertising, including the use of mobile broadcasting in commercial stores . . . to stop giveaway programs that debase radio advertising," he said.

He also urged that the CBC establish an AM radio outlet in Victoria, rather than relegate it "to the obscurity of FM."

But with regard to television, the mayor said a CBC station in Victoria would be no improvement on the present "insignificant" performance of CHEK-TV. He said CBC Television copies commercial television and called CBC-TV "One of the dismal failures of Canadian broadcasting."

What Victoria needs, said Pollen, is a television outlet modelled on the Public Broadcasting Service in the United States—something to give "intellectual sustenance" to the people of his city.

During the hearing, commission chairman Juneau disclosed the provincial government has asked that the only unused VFH (very high frequency) channel in the Vancouver-Victoria area, channel 10, be reserved for government use.

CHEK wants to drop its CBC affiliation and join the CTV network, but cannot do so until the CBC has its own TV outlet in Victoria. Representatives of CHEK and the CBC testified that exhaustive tests show that Channel 10 is the most feasible channel for a CBC Victoria station.

The CRTC's decision on all applications will be announced at some later date.

NEW Oak Bay fire chief is Fred Leeke, 47, who will succeed William T. Pearson, Dec. 1. Leeke, of 1879 Feltham, has been with the Oak Bay department for 24 years.

UBC Man Named Conciliator

University of B.C. commerce professor W. T. Stanbury has been appointed conciliator for contract talks between teachers and school boards in six lower Island school districts.

Stanbury's appointment follows the abortive appointment of Victoria lawyer Louis Lindholm who is out of the country for several months.

As conciliator, Stanbury will try to bring together teachers and school trustees in the six districts in hopes of reaching a contract agreement before the Nov. 15 deadline.

Provincial legislation requires districts which have not settled by that date to go to binding arbitration.

FOURTH FIRE IN 9 DAYS

Firemen were called Wednesday for the fourth time in nine days to put out a fire in a garbage container at Douglas and Yates.

A spokesman said it was not known whether the fires have been set or caused by cigarette butts.

Ferry Decision Near?

A meeting in Seattle tonight may decide the fate of the Canadian Pacific's Princess Marguerite.

CP Rail spokesman said today a company official will meet an "interested group" in Seattle tonight but would give no names.

However, Ron Mullins, general manager of Westours Ind. of Seattle, is leading a bid to buy the Marguerite and reinstate her on the Victoria - Seattle ferry run.

Maritime Museum board trustee James McCrossan contacted Maple Shipping Co. Ltd. of Vancouver today in an effort to have the Marguerite's sale stalled. McCrossan hopes to raise enough interest to have "commercial interests" join museum officials in a bid on the vessel.

McCrossan said the Marguerite could be used as a combination of maritime museum, restaurant and shops.

The CP Rail spokesman said, "There will be no special delay made for anybody."

Mayor Peter Pollen said Wednesday the museum has shown "a total lack of initiative" in not raising funds but relying on government agencies.

It has been announced the museum's society will go into liquidation Dec. 31. It has been notified it has to vacate the Bastion Square building in March.

It's Cheaper by Helicopter

By ELEANOR BOYLE
Times Staff

Cattle Point's winding road is barricaded several times weekly for use as a helicopter pad.

Bundles of supplies are loaded into nets hung from a federal Ministry of Transport helicopter that takes off from the pad alongside Oak Bay's Beach Drive and heads for nearby Discovery Island.

But one day this week the order was for lumber and cement for construction of a new lighting plant foundation on the island.

On the foundation will rest two new diesel engines replacing the 14-year-old machines now operating the lighthouse beacon and all electrical facilities on Discovery.

"I haven't got enough power to run the station," said lightkeeper Sholto Fox, because the present engines are inadequate.

The 12 horsepower, 5 kilowatt engines will be retired, in favor of 18 horsepower, 15 kilowatt engines.

Fox hopes to see the new diesels operating by Nov. 15.

Helicopter supply delivery is normally chosen over delivery by water, although the island is approachable by boat, unlike some of the storm-lashed islands on the northern B.C. coast.

Trips by helicopter are less trouble and expense because of the manpower involved in transportation of supplies in MOT's large ships.

The helicopter does not, however, deliver to Trial Island lightstation, off Dallas Road, because its keepers bring in their own food and materials by small boat.

Ask the Times

Q: Could you give me some information on beachcombing for logs? Where do industries buy salvage logs? Is a licence required to do the work? A. P. R.

A: Log salvagers must have licences to work in public waters, and they are obtained from the B.C. Forest Service. Once a log is recovered from the beach it must be returned to the company that lost it, identifiable by a stamp on the log itself. Prices vary according to the market. Logging company officials asked to comment on your question said the work can be profitable if salvagers have capital to start with, know the local waters and something of navigation, and like hard work.

Q: Who should I contact regarding the practice of driving new cars from Windsor across Canada? A.N.

A: It is a common practice whereby a person may drive a vehicle west but must pay the cost of the gas. Once in Windsor, just phone the major car dealers. They'll line you up with a car that needs to be transported.

New Block For Gov't

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Details of the building will be announced in a few days but Public Works Minister Bill Hartley said the structure will be "six or seven storeys high."

Hartley would not disclose the exact location of the new building but said it will be outside the legislative precinct in keeping with the province's promise to the city to build some accommodation downtown.

Expansion of the B.C. Hydro and Law Courts buildings are the first steps in the plan, said Hartley, and the new downtown building is the next project.

The minister declined to give any specific outline of the government's over-all expansion plans but he said he is thinking in terms of several buildings of six or seven storeys each.

"It's difficult to imagine one million square feet," he said, "but I always use an example like the Belmont Building.

"It would take 20 Belmont buildings to get one million square feet," she said.

Hartley said he could not accurately predict the cost of the entire project but it could run higher than $50 million.

While the government hopes to decentralize its buildings to help the downtown core and to relieve congestion in the James Bay area, some buildings will definitely be built within the legislative precinct.

Establishment of large parking lots on the northern perimeter of the city to accommodate a park-and-ride scheme for public servants is designed to eliminate the need for some parking lots around the legislature and those lots may be used for future building development.

One parking area, across the street from the motor-vehicle branch on Menzies, is being given prime consideration, said Hartley, but no building has been designed for it yet.

The purpose of office expansion program is to make the government "the master in its home" and to save money, said Hartley.

This year the government will spend more than $5 million on rents and leases in Victoria alone and about $8 million around the province.

Hartley admits the cost of rental accommodation has doubled since last year but he says inflation has hit, the civil service has grown and the government is finally "getting people out of cupboards and closets and vaults and hallways and putting them into worthwhile working space."

He denies charges of Op-

JUBA WINS

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Mayor Stephen Juba, who has become something of a local political fixture during his more than two decades in public office, won another landslide victory Wednesday and a ninth consecutive term of office.

Juba's victory was never in doubt from the time results starting coming in.

Dentist Hurls Candy

Jonathan Howland, interim co-ordinator of the islands regional health and human resources council, said the incident started when he and Dr. Orr were standing beside the candy counter having a discussion about tooth decay.

"I said something like, 'well, what do we do about it then, Robert?' and he replied: 'We start right here' and began picking up packages of jelly beans and announcing that the store was a dope pusher.

"He distributed packages of jelly beans in ever-increasing circles. The store was fairly crowded at the time and everyone just stood there stunned."

Ron Watkins, grocery manager of the Delmas Co-Op, said he will lay a charge of causing a disturbance against Dr. Orr when a magistrate calls at the islands.

"I suppose he has a point, but that's no way to go about making it," said Watkins. "We do sell a lot of candy to the Indian kids here but no more than any other store would."

Commons Erupts Over Filthy Meat

Times News Services

OTTAWA—The scandal over filth in meat erupted today in the Commons when opposition MPs attacked Health Minister Marc Lalonde for saying consumers can cook impurities out of the meat.

New Democratic Party spokesman Ed Broadbent charged that Lalonde's advice on cooking hamburger amounts to suggesting that people can "eat excrement providing it's well cooked."

The attack on Lalonde followed an earlier sharp exchange between the health minister and prices review board chairman Beryl Plumptre who said Wednesday the government has virtually given meat merchants a licence to sell substandard meat.

Plumptre told a news conference that inspection services provided by the health department are inadequate, and government and meat sellers are doing less than enough to see that humburger is safe to eat.

She was commenting on a CBC television program Sunday which reported finding fecal contamination and other bacteria in a number of hamburger samples collected in Ontario.

Lalonde said Wednesday that Plumptre should become better informed and that germs are no problem if hamburger is well cooked. He recommended cooking the meat at 160 degrees or more to destroy any health hazards.

"That's fine if everyone likes to eat hamburger well done," Plumptre shot back at her news conference.

Broadbent urged the government to insure that retail meat outlets are adequately inspected.

Further, he said, it likely would mean an inspector in every home because consumers may not be handling their ground beef properly.

This brought Broadbent to his feet in a hurry, saying the bacteria are potentially fatal and that the minister is saying it is safe to "eat excrement providing it's well-cooked."

Lalonde replied that the NDP leader was not taking the issue seriously and that he "clearly has been carried away by his own imagination."

"There is no relationship between what he has said and what I said," the minister added.

He asked Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan whether he could "take on" Lalonde and Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet to insure that beef is handled properly at every stage between the farm and the home.

Whelan replied that "different departments are known for co-operating" to protect the public.

Jim McGrath, Conservative consumer affairs watchdog, said the government should improve its inspection system so that products "unfit for human consumption" are not for sale.

Lalonde said in an interview later that to strive for food products without bacteria would be "horrendously expensive."

"We have to have realistic standards."

Lalonde, who recently suggested that Canadians try powdered milk to avoid the rising costs of whole milk added:

"You can't have an inspector in every shop in Canada, just like you can't have one policeman for every citizen."

S. Africa Wines Barred

South African wines and liquors will no longer be listed by B.C. liquor stores.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said today B.C. will mark the 30th annniversary of the founding of the United Nations today by banning South African liquor.

The ban is a gesture by B.C. to show its opposition to the "institutionalized racism" practised in South Africa, said Macdonald, and is a signal to the people of South Africa to "reverse these disastrous policies before it is too late."

Macdonald said however, that "individual choice" will remain in B.C. since private citizens will still be able to order cases of South African wines for their own use.

The ban will not mean elimination of South African product immediately, since the liquor stores throughout the province still have 4,991 cases of wine and liquor left.

FOR 78 YEARS Captain George Vancouver, about 400 pounds in bronze, has stared impassively from his lookout atop the Legislative Buildings dome. This morning he came down, gently lowered by workmen using a giant crane. The problem: fallen arches — and who can blame him? Rusting supports through the statue's feet will be replaced.

UIC to Ask For 'Proof'

MONTREAL (CP) — Between 50 and 60 per cent of persons who receive Unemployment Insurance Commission (UIC) benefits will soon need to show proof that there are no job opportunities for them, Supplies and Services Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer said Wednesday.

Mr. Goyer told a meeting of his riding association that legislation is to be introduced strengthening and co-ordinating the operations of the UIC and Canada Manpower centres.

He said the changes will affect recipients in at least four categories but did not elaborate what he meant by "proof."

Whenever there is a shortage in a particular field of work, all UIC recipients who qualify for that work would be called in to report "physically" to the nearest UIC office.

Maternity benefits are to be increased to 15 weeks, up from nine, but women receiving the benefits will be called to the UIC office at the end of that period to determine whether they are looking for a job.

UIC recipients who move from one province to another would have to report to a UIC office in the new province as soon as they settle down.

He also said workers who quit their jobs and request benefits would be called in to explain their case and prove they have not been able to get another job.

MIGRANT HOOKERS IN LOADS?

OTTAWA (CP) — Truckloads of prostitutes may be crossing the United States border to ply their trade in Vancouver's Gastown district, George Whittaker (PC—Okanagan-Boundary) said today.

He told the Commons that three law students, working part-time for the Vancouver police department, made the allegation Wednesday on an open-line radio program.

"I have no personal knowledge of this," replied Revenue Minister Ron Basford, whose Vancouver Centre riding encompasses Gastown, a renovated skid road area.

But he promised, amid laughter from both sides of the House, to discuss the matter with Immigration Minister Robert Andras to see "if one or both of us should go to Vancouver to investigate."

Mr. Whittaker, 54 and the father of five, said later his information is sketchy.

"I've never gone down and tested the market. This isn't something I know a lot about, you know."

But the allegations should be checked thoroughly, he said.

"This kind of stuff should not be allowed. The government should step in and put a stop to it."

Bremer Suing Barrett, Dailly

In a British Columbia Supreme Court writ filed Wednesday, Bremer alleges that Premier Barrett libelled and slandered him on CBC television on or about Jan. 11.

Violin Genius Dies at 65

A spokesman for the Amsterdam Philharmonic Orchestra said the Soviet violinist, son of a poor Jewish bookkeeper, died shortly before 4 a.m.

Pollution Again

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — For the second time in a week, the department of ecology has issued a statewide air pollution warning, calling for a shutdown of open burning. The department issued a forecast warning, the lowest of four warning levels based on a national weather service forecast of stable air conditions, little air movements, poor ventilation and stagnant air.

Thieu Sacks Four

School Bombed

LONDON (Reuter) — Harrow school, one of Britain's most famous public schools, was the target for a bomb attack Wednesday night, only 24 hours after a blast at an exclusive London club. Police said a bomb weighing between three and five pounds was placed in a windowsill of a house occupied by three teachers and their wives. Nobody was hurt.

NIXON IN HOSPITAL, SURGERY CONSIDERED

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Former president Richard Nixon was readmitted to Memorial Hospital Wednesday night for further treatment of his left leg. Nixon's doctor said if the treatment proves ineffective, surgery may be required.

Dr. John Lungren, Nixon's personal physician, said the decision to readmit Nixon to the hospital for further diagnostic tests was made after oral medication proved ineffective for treatment of the problem.

Lungren said tests earlier in the evening revealed blockages of blood vessels resulting in a "near total occlusion or blockage of blood flow" in Nixon's left thigh.

Sugar Profit Up 1,200%

NEW YORK (AP) — Great Western United Corp. says soaring sugar prices resulted in a 1,200 per cent increase in the corporation's after-tax profits during the third quarter of this year.

Net income for the three-month period ended Sept. 30 increased to $20.96 million, or $9.23 a share. That compares with $1.6 million, or three cents a share, earned in the same period in 1973. Board chairman Robert Everett credited the sharp increase in earnings to the continuing high level of sugar prices.

Having Trouble With Computers?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Have you ever tried to deal with a computer that persists in sending you bills you have already paid and for which you have sent numerous letters explaining your predicament?

Beginning Monday a Vancouver ombudsman service will operate to help the victims of computer monoliths.

"It should help relieve a major frustration of consumers," says Dave Hinks, of the Consumers' Association of Canada, which joined with the Canadian Information Processing Society to introduce the service.

It is believed the first of its type in Canada and possibly in North America.

The ombudsman office will be staffed by a group of computer experts to handle the complaints lodged by persons finding themselves incapable of further dealings with an unsympathetic computer.

The ombudsman, drawn from the committee of experts on a rotating basis, will work in three areas: handling individual problems, handling class problems where a group of persons have been subjected to the same computer error, and watching for the formation of "computer monsters." Such monsters could include organizations storing massive confidential, personal information.

As there is no legislation backing the service, the ombudsman will have to rely on the good will of the companies or agencies complaints are lodged against.

Dr. Ted Sterling, director of the computing science department at Burnaby's Simon Fraser University, says the group will basically be using persuasion to achieve its aims.

And if a company tells the ombudsman to drop dead?

"The other thing we have is publicity," says Sterling. "But we will not use that weapon lightly."

Owners Smell Bureaucratic Rat

Apartment owners in B.C. fear the government is planning "another multi-million dollar bureaucracy" in addition to the Rentalsman's office, to deal with rent controls.

Richard Dolman, executive-director of the Rental Housing Council of B.C., said Wednesday his group believes the government plans to set up an "allowablesman" to take over some of the functions now handled by Barrie Clark in the rentalsman's office.

"It's just another excuse for further delay and further bureaucracy," said Dolman.

The council believes the government will introduce changes in the Landlord and Tenant Act to set up the new bureaucracy for the sole purpose of recommending new rent ceilings and dealing with complaints about rent increases from tenants.

"The allowablesman will probably acquire a staff of economists and a big bureaucracy and play around with rent increases for another three months," said Dolman.

The charge comes in the wake of an announcement by Clark that he has recommended Attorney-General Alex Macdonald set up a separate commission to decide how large a rent hike landlords should be permitted.

Under the new landlord and tenant legislation, Clark has the power to recommend an allowable rent increase level to replace the interim eight per cent limit on rent increases.

But Clark admitted at a press conference Wednesday he has "ducked the question" by making recommendations to the government without actually suggesting a new figure.

The rentalsman said he believes an independent commission should make the decision on rent increases so he can maintain his new position as impartial judge and medjator in landlord-tenant disputes.

Macdonald had originially promised the new ceiling would be announced by Oct. 1. Then he said by the end of the month and now he says the ceiling will likely not be announced until the legislative session, when changes in the tenant legislation are expected.

The ceiling will come into effect Jan. 1, 1975.

Debate, over the issue continues to rage as the apartment owners threaten to strike if Macdonald does not announce the ceiling by the end of the week.

The council, which is demanding either a rent increase ceiling in the range of 20 per cent or no ceiling at all, will meet tonight to discuss further action.

If Macdonald does not have a concrete statement to make after today's cabinet meeting, Dolman says the group will likely decide to strike but will make the official announcement Friday morning.

By striking, the landlords mean they will not rent new apartments which become vacant. About 1,600 landlords belong to the council, a majority of apartment owners in the province.

Meanwhile, Bruce Yorke, president of the B.C. Tenants Organization, rallied with a handful of tenants on the lawns of the Legislative Buildings Wednesday, demanding the eight per cent rent freeze stay in effect.

The tenants placed a large sign on the lawn, reading "Keep Rents Down" and handed Macdonald a 15,000-name petition demanding retention of the rent freeze.
